WATER, WATER

Upland Water and Utility Director Larry Dilley stands in front of an area that has been created by underground water coming to the surface to form 'lakes'. On the cover: Underground water pours out of these 'lakes' at the rate of 400 to 600 gallons per minute.

Water is something most people don't think about much. You turn on the tap — out it comes. It's only when it doesn't that you're forced to pay attention.

Upland's water and utility director, Larry Dilley, has water on his mind most of the time. It's his responsibility to make sure the water is there when needed.

Does it keep him up nights, knowing that the city of Upland uses about 454.4 million gallons of water every month?

"No, of course not," he said with a laugh. "It does keep me thinking about what needs to be done and what should be done. Everything we do has to be carefully considered because here, more than many other places, that physics law that says for every action there is a reaction is especially true."

Upland's water comes from a variety of sources. Most, about 60 percent, is drawn from the Chino Valley Water Basin. Another 30 percent of the local water supply is pumped from the Cucamonga Water Basin, and the remaining 10 percent comes from the Claremont Heights Basin.

"These basins control all the water in this area," Dilley said. Upland receives an adjudicated amount (the above percentages) and that's its share of the available water.

"If we were to pump more than our share, then we would have to pay a pump tax, which would increase the cost of our water," he said. "To my recollection, we've never exceeded our amount. When we don't need it all, we just put it in storage."

The Upland Water Department owns shares in both the San Antonio Water Co. and West End Water. "Together they are called the San Antonio Water and West End Operating Co."

"We have acquired 58.3 percent of San Antonio and 77.46 of West End, but the city is content to leave the operation of the district to them," he said.

The city has not felt the need to push for control because the existing company gets water at an agricultural rate, or a lesser rate than would a city-run operation, Dilley said.

"It has always been my goal to provide the best water at the cheapest rates. And if we were to run our own water company, the rates would have to go up," he said.

Water in Upland is not a straightforward proposition. "We get our water from a variety of sources and some of the water in Upland is not owned by Upland, yet we own wells in Claremont that we aren't using," Dilley said.

It all goes back to the days when the Chaffey brothers dispensed water from a mountain flume.

"There were water rights and water companies all over the place when Upland Water bought out all the small companies in 1923, and was formed. Not much was going on in water until about 1958; then things really started to happen. It was about the same time the city really started to grow," he said.

Upland's water system has 12 reservoirs, seven wells and six pumping stations. "It's hard to believe, but there are 190 miles of water mains, 465 four-inch hydrants and 1,400 six-inch hydrants in the city and we maintain all of them. Of course, we also are available to help when problems happen," he said.

The oldest operating reservoir in the city was built in 1923 and has a capacity of 200,000 gallons. The newest was built in 1976. Located on the north side of 24th Street east of Forman Street, it has a capacity of 10 million gallons, making it the biggest in the system.

The total storage capacity of the city water system is 37.5 million gallons, Dilley said.

"The department is very well organized and, with the telemetry control, it makes it very easy to keep a handle on everything that is going on at all times," he said. "If one reservoir says 'I'm thirsty,' it's just a matter of flicking a few switches and directing the water from another well."

Things were not so sophisticated when Dilley first came to the water department 20 years ago. "I started at the bottom and I have done every job — meter reader, ditch-digger, running the wells — there have been a lot of changes in the last 20 years," he said.

"Any city that has its own water company has a source of revenue. Although some operate out of the general fund, 10 or 12 years ago, Upland made us an enterprise fund," he said. Money generated goes back into the system.

"This way we have money for capital improvements without going back to the city, hat in hand, and asking for it," he said.

Present plans call for construction of a 60 million-gallon-per-day treatment plant in Upland. Under the auspices of the Water Facilities Authority Joint Powers Agency (WFAJFA), the cities of Upland, Ontario and Chino and the Monte Vista Water Co. and the county are combining efforts to build the plant.

"Our growth pattern plan says we are going to need more water in the future and this is one of the reasons we are entering into this," he said.

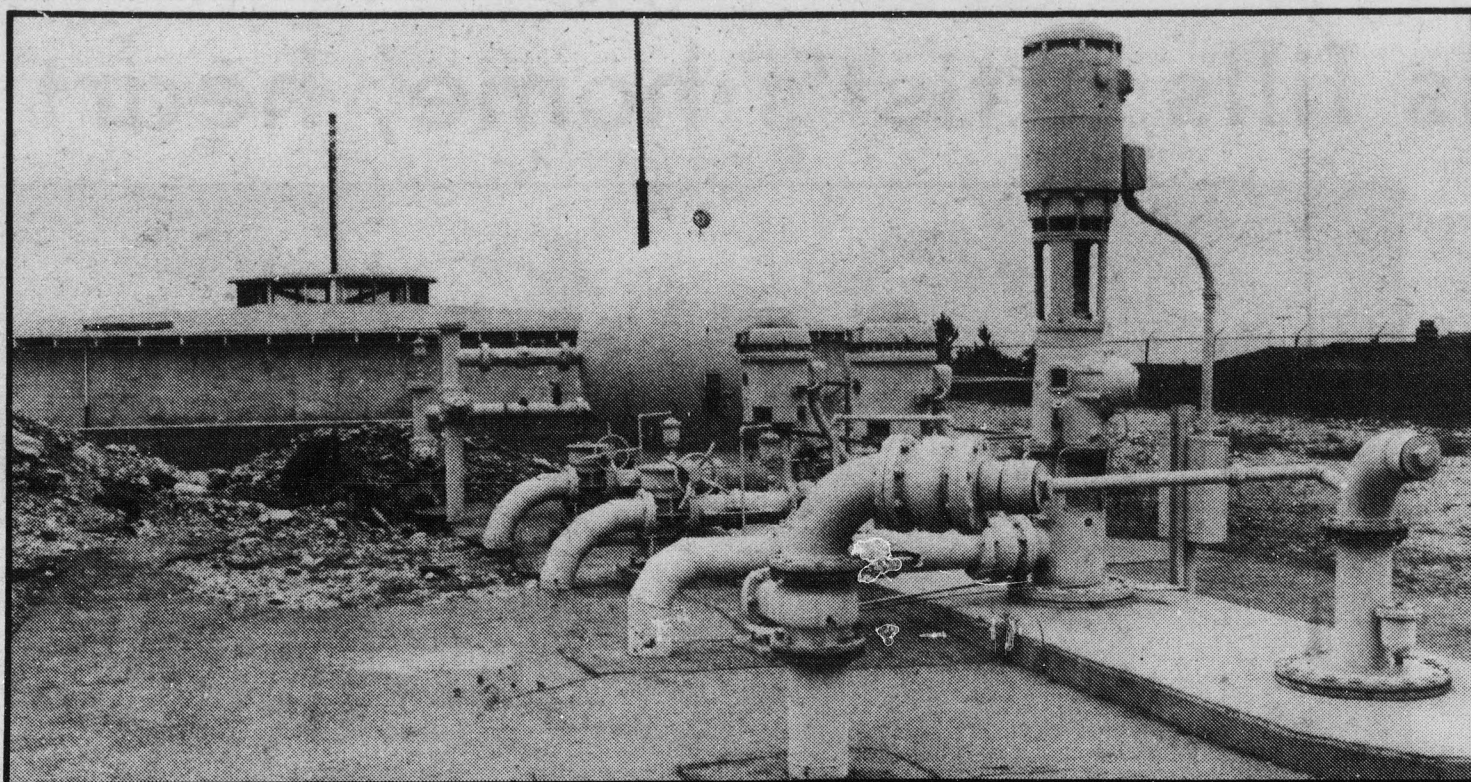

The plant will be located on the southwest corner of 18th Street and Benson Avenue. Initially, it will treat 35 million gallons per day, but is expected to eventually treat 60 million gallons per day.

Upland's allocation from the plant would be 10 million gallons per day, with the rest of the capacity split between the other owners.

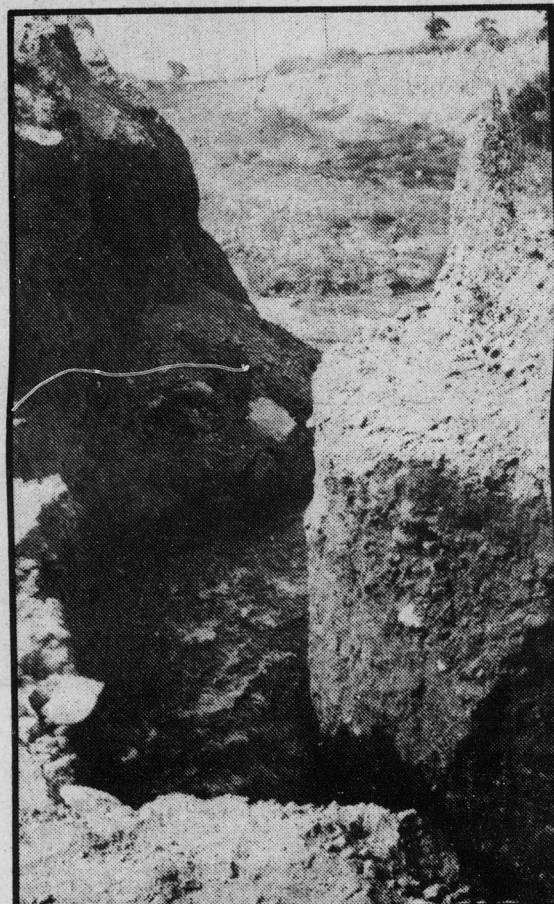

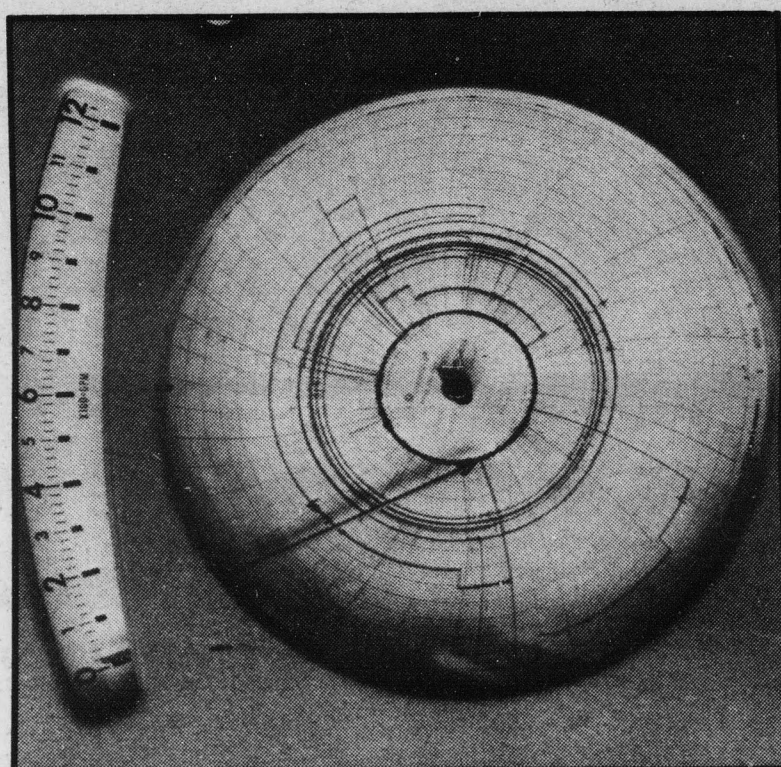

"We hope to have all the legal documents ready to sign in August. If we get that done, then the design work should be

EVERYWHERE

Construction is expected to begin in 1985, with completion hoped for in 1987.

Upland was selected as the plant site because of its proximity to the Rialto Reach from Devil's Canyon (a source of water) and because most of the places the water would be piped to are downhill from Upland. Taking advantage of gravity will save pumping costs, Dilley said.

Each city is responsible for financing a share of the plant and all have applied for loans of $1.5 million from the Department of Water Resources. The remainder of the construction costs would be divided locally, based on the amount of capacity each agency is allotted.

Upland would get the money for its share either from bonds, reserves or an increase in water rates, Dilley said.

Projected cost for the total project is estimated at $37 million, Dilley said, and will be shared by all involved.

Because of the high water table in the northwest portion of the city, portions of the sites leased by Holiday and Conrock in that area have been transformed into "water wonderlands."

Five years ago, the water table was so high it formed a series of lakes in that area. They are still there.

Dilley estimates they are about 20 feet deep in most places. A small waterfall cut across one site, dropping about 18 feet to a lower level.

"There are some beautiful spots around here," he said, "but this is private property and it's not open to the public for sight-seeing or use. I suppose now they'll start having trouble with people who don't obey the 'no trespassing' signs," he said.

Even though Upland had more than 40 inches of rain this year, flooding problems were minimized in this area.

"A channel was cut diverting some of the water down the San Antonio wash and into the gravel pits south of Foothill. This reduced the flow going into the Claremont Heights area," Dilley said.

He said the higher levels are a plus for them because it makes wells cheaper to pump. Dilley estimated the water is coming up out of the ground where the waterfall has formed at between 400 and 600 gallons per minute.

Although most of the area is technically in the city limits of Upland, it is owned by San Antonio Water and West End Operating Co.

"Water in the basin is being released by the Army Corps of Engineers to the area controlled by the Pomona Valley Protective Association and San Antonio. This water and the groundwater are forming the 'lakes.' All the spreading basins are owned by San Antonio Water and then leased to the Flood Control District," Dilley said.

The water situation in the West Valley has been compared to a giant patchwork quilt made up of confusing pieces.

"It's not as simple as just turning on a tap," Dilley said. □

Stained glass fills artist's home, heart

By Lauren Richards

Her part-time laundry room is almost a life-size kaleidoscope, filled with glass of varying sizes, shapes, colors and textures.

Her hands are calloused from years of laborious craftwork and her face shows signs of stress, probably the result of the many classes she teaches.

For the past nine years D'Anna Rodriguez of Etiwanda has immersed herself, her home and her family in stained glass art.

A one-time art major at San Jose State University, Rodriguez began applying her creativity to stained glass after she and her husband took a course in the art almost nine years ago.

Rodriguez pursued her interest in the craft and today her home is decorated with everything from windows and wall-hangings to a light shade made of eye-glass lenses, all pouring a multitude of colors through her house.

Her most recent projects, which are hardly traditional, show the confidence she has gained over the years; the earlier items are simple and geometric with distinct, definable patterns.

Today, she abandons her contemporary designs only when commissioned to do so, which she said in an almost painful tone, happens often.

"Most people want the same thing. Sometimes I get very, very discouraged ... they're afraid to try color, but they want stained glass," she lamented.

Even in providing for the whims of mass culture, though, Rodriguez is content with the work she has done. She proudly displays the popular, if somewhat uncreative, daffodil pattern many of her customers ask for.

Renowned throughout the community for her skill in the ancient art, Rodriguez does commissioned work and repairs and teaches classes in both Upland and Rancho Cucamonga.

"Some of my things are sold on consignment through a restaurant (the Moonraker) in Cambria, but those are hard to sell," Rodriguez said.

"It's more profitable, for me, when I'm commissioned, but it's less rewarding artistically."

Though she has yet to discover the original process used during the 14th century, Rodriguez

Cities need new approaches to stay afloat

By Tim Brown
Upland Finance Director

As you read the daily newspaper or listen to the broadcast media, it becomes obvious to all concerned that Upland is not alone in its fiscal crisis. Rather, each level of government in one form or another is having a serious crisis in governance.

Dollar values are a very important factor in the budgetary process — but what is often overlooked by the public are the reasons why cities incorporate.

Therefore, in the Upland case, let's digress for a moment back to 1906 when Upland was granted a separate charter and became a city. This would mark the beginning of the phase of "home rule" for the area's residents — which they desired for greater control over the quality of their environment and consequently the quality of their lives.

Although the characteristics of Upland have changed tremendously since 1906, the reasons why people chose to locate in the area have not. People gravitate to an area for a variety of reasons — schools, safety, parks, etc. — but one of the most powerful is the quality of life the area offers. Upland offers a very high quality of life; it is a very pleasant place to live.

The problem is that the quality of life and level of services we were once able to offer is being reduced since we do not have the funds to pay for them.

This quality of life for cities changed when the taxpayers voted on June 8, 1978, for Proposition 13. This is not to say that Proposition 13 was the culprit, for most government employees probably voted for Proposition 13, without realizing what type of impact this would have in subsequent years.

Now we find that the State of California is unable to meet many of its own revenue obligations. The question that immediately comes to mind is "why is the state in the fix it is in?" Perhaps it was the inability to predict that the spectacular revenue growth generated between 1975 and 1979 would not be sustained, and today we find a widespread, deep economic downturn. These factors, coupled with the loss of federal revenue

Improving work performance is topic of Chaffey workshop

A management workshop titled "New Tools for Improving Employee Performance and Teamwork" will be presented at Chaffey College July 26 from 8:45 a.m. to noon.

Loma Hopkins, manager of several innovative programs at the college, will lead the workshop designed to assist executives, managers, supervisors and personnel officers in strengthening employees performance, morale and teamwork.

Hopkins said participants will use management materials published by Performax, Inc. "These management materials are rapidly becoming popular management and counseling tools," she added.

The materials presented in the workshop will also assist participants in career counseling and placement of individuals into positions appropriate for their work behavioral styles, Hopkins said.

The instruments to be used in the workshop include the "Personal Profile System," "Job Factor Analysis System" and "Activity Perception System."

The "Personal Profile System" can be used to identify individual work behavioral styles, approach and resistance to change, behaviors used under pressure, an individual's chief value to an organization, how to work more effectively with others and what each individual in an organization needs to be motivated and productive.

The "Job Factor Analysis System" provides a painless method for communicating in minutes performance expectations not found in job descriptions, but which are among the biggest problems for supervisors, especially with new or marginal employees.

This analysis system is effective in conflict resolution, performance appraisals, job training programs, employee selection, improving productivity and developing employee understanding. It clarifies job responsibilities; improves interpersonal relationships; focuses on tasks, not personalities; and helps rate tasks by priority level.

Officials hope changes at two city parks will relieve overcrowding at Memorial and create more quiet moments there like the one shown above.

Park facilities in constant demand

By David Miller

City parks and recreation officials have taken several steps in an attempt to relieve crowded conditions at Memorial Park.

It is estimated that the park, located just off Foothill Boulevard east of 11th Avenue, is used by as many as 350,000 people a year. Memorial's outdoor kitchen and various playing fields are in constant demand, especially during the summer months.

In an effort to make them more attractive, city officials have undertaken several projects to improve the facilities at Sierra Vista and Magnolia parks, both located north of Memorial. They will be equipped with new picnic tables and playground equipment.

Both Sierra Vista and Magnolia are located off 15th Avenue, the former east of Euclid and the latter in between Euclid and San Antonio. They are the only parks in the city other than Memorial with public restroom facilities, an important factor in the decision to add the new structures at those sites.

While the projects are just now getting underway, Upland Recreation Director Larry Thornburgh stressed the need to get them completed because the facilities at Memorial are "pretty well booked up for the summer."

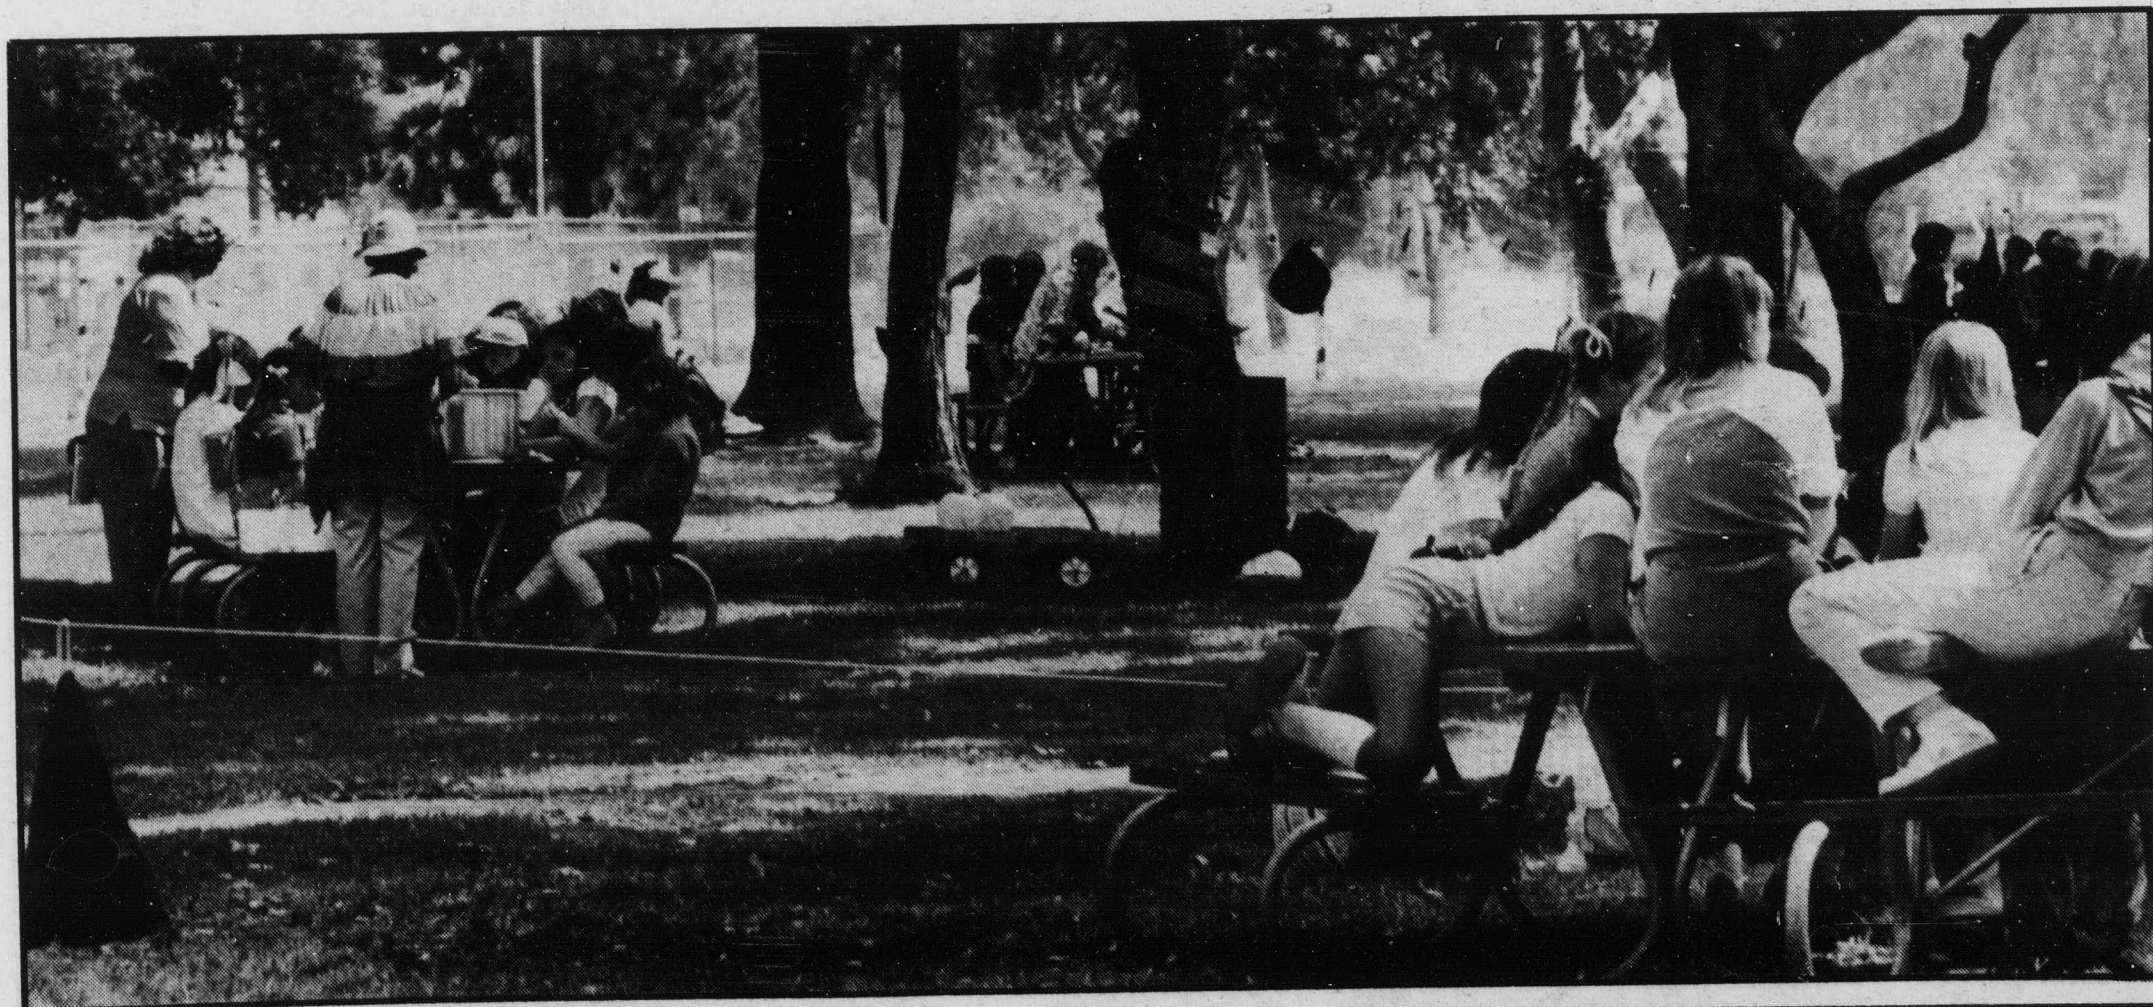

He says the city hopes to use the fact that both Sierra Vista and Magnolia have playing fields for softball and other activities as another means of luring residents seeking recreational areas to those parks. Most of the changes will take place at Sierra Vista, including roughly $18,000 in playground equipment and about two dozen trees, which will be planted to provide additional shade at the park.

Thornburgh says that while people mainly try to reserve the outdoor kitchen facilities at Memorial, the playing fields there are also highly sought-after and the rest of the park, available on a first come, first served basis, is occupied frequently. Thornburgh says its use has become "excessive."

"Another thing that we found out is that

Overcrowded conditions at Memorial Park have led parks and recreational officials to build additional picnic facilities at two other city parks.

Preschools slip learning into play

By David Miller

There are some 4-year-olds in Upland and Rancho Cucamonga who are not getting much of a vacation this summer. What they are getting instead is a little education and a lot of respect.

Several schools in neighboring communities are preparing many of the two cities' preschoolers for the big leap to kindergarten in the fall. While their approaches vary, they share a desire to lay a foundation that will prepare a youngster mentally and physically for the coming year.

The Renaissance Preschool in Rancho Cucamonga offers a summerlong program for preschoolers. The school's staff hopes that the 24 children currently enrolled in the program will be at the first grade level in basic skills such as reading and writing by the end of summer.

Theresa Richardson, the director at Renaissance, says the school's name and indeed the philosophy behind the school derived from the desire to create a "new beginning" for teaching preschool-aged children.

Richardson says children are grouped by age rather than ability. In addition to basic reading and math skills, the staff teaches children the fundamentals of using a library.

She says many preschoolers come in with feelings of insecurity over their new environment, and the staff tries to help the children overcome their fears before they enter kindergarten. That is accomplished, she says, by making the learning process seem fun and by showing the children that, working together as human beings, they can teach their teachers something, too.

"It is not just, here's the teacher, here's the child. We're one, and the kids help us," Richardson says. "We try to show the kids a lot of love and show them that we care."

A play-learning situation also prevails at Mountain View Preschool and Day Care in Upland, with more emphasis on the play than on the learning. Director Nora Vignoli says that since a good many of the children are involved year-round at the school, the summer program is designed to give the children a break before cracking down again in the fall. Most of those who will enter kindergarten in September were honored earlier this month for the work they did earlier in the school year, sort of like a "grad night" for preschoolers.

The summer program features singing, arts and crafts, and aerobics — performed to the tune of Mickey Mouse records. Vignoli says the children are also taught to get along with their peers, and since Mountain View is sponsored by the Mountain View Menonite Church, there are also classes in Bible studies.

The Chaffey's and their legacy

By John H. Nicholson

John H. Nicholson

On occasion, we will glance backward to times well before my arrival here, to mention parts of the past that relative newcomers may not have heard about. For example, where did the often-used name of Chaffey come from?

Somewhere in the mid-1800s, a few pioneer ranches were established in this part of the valley. Around 1878, George Chaffey Sr. and his son, William B. Chaffey, came from their family homesite, 90 miles south of Ottawa, Ontario, Canada.

They had heard of innovations in irrigation and agriculture at Riverside. William was an accomplished agriculturist, and they soon planted one of the first citrus groves in the area.

Hearing glowing tales from California, another son, George Jr., with wide engineering experience, joined his father and brother about 1880. He traveled the valley by horse and became quite interested in the areas known today as Rancho Cucamonga, Upland and Ontario.

Of particular interest was the seemingly generous water supply from the streams that came out of the nearby mountains. The Chaffey's began buying land and water rights, eventually owning about 10,000 acres.

The Chaffey's first developed 1,000 acres, which they called the Etiwanda colony, after a friendly Indian chief back in Ontario, Canada. It is in the northeast part of what is now the city of Rancho Cucamonga. It was sold later, to help them finance their planned, larger, Ontario Colony.

Here, they developed a colony, eight miles long and about 2½ miles wide, with 200-foot-wide Euclid Avenue as its backbone. The still-vital San Antonio Water Co. was formed by the Chaffey's in late 1882, and a comprehensive water system was developed. Concrete pipelines carried water to each 10-acre farm lot, and to smaller city lots.

In 1883, land and one share of water stock were sold together for $150-$250 per acre. The family donated 20 acres at Fifth Street and Euclid Avenue as the site for a college, and another 320 acres as a college endowment. In 1883, the Chaffey Agricultural College was established, beginning the ever-growing Chaffey schools system.

In 1886, with the Ontario Colony well-engineered and progressing nicely, the Chaffey's sold out and moved on to new challenges in Australia. They founded the community of Renmark in New South Wales, and then the community of Mildura, Victoria. Both are on the sizeable Murray

Library has 100,000 books in its collection

By Marie Rooth

We had a dilly of a reference call from an adult patron. "Do you have every book ever printed?" she wanted to know!

Well, no, but ...

Only 50 years after Mr. Gutenberg printed the first 42-line Bible in 1456 there were more than 9,000,000 printed manuscripts in existence.

1982 Books in Print, the listing of books published in the U.S. each year, listed 591,100 titles available for purchase; 29,000 of these appeared for the first time that year. Children's Books in Print listed an additional 40,461 titles available, making a total of 631,561 volumes for sale in 1982.

Library news

The Library of Congress, which by law has to receive a copy of each copyrighted item, adds approximately 1,000,000 items to its collection each year. Currently its collection stands at 75,000,000 items, of which 9,000,000 are books.

The Upland Public Library has 100,000 books in its collection. Each year we add around 5,000-8,500 books, depending on budget ups and downs. Ontario Public Library has a collection of about 200,000, Pomona more than 400,000, Rancho Cucamonga and Montclair branches of the San Bernardino County own 37,000 and 64,000 respectively.

So, the answer to the question, "Do you have every book ever printed?" is an emphatic "No, we don't have every book ever printed, thank goodness!"

The "Activity Perception System" allows two or more persons to compare their views of how certain tasks should be accomplished and to identify the human factor differences in expectations and styles solving problems.

Managers find this system useful in clarifying what behaviors an individual needs to emphasize more or less in the performance of job responsibilities. It is also useful in career path planning and team building. Partners in small businesses have found this to be an extremely beneficial communication and planning tool.

Coach-turned-guitarist forms a camp

By Patricia Coladonato

Les Holstein had a dream. In his dream he was a well-known, well-respected guitar performer and instructor whose 'easy listening' style of picking had attracted a throng of fans.

It was a dream not uncommon among self-taught musicians. Yet, to Holstein, it became much more.

Ten years ago Holstein quit his job as basketball coach for Western Christian High School to begin the long and often discouraging challenge of making his dream a reality.

Today, although there are no fans following him from one performance to the next, and no record companies rushing to offer him recording contracts, Holstein has found a small measure of success in the music business.

He is in demand at weddings and receptions and is a popular performer at community group meetings and at local banquets.

He also has a growing number of students whose weekly lessons provide him with a steady income as well as a sense of immortality.

And he also has ideas, such as his plan to run a guitar camp for youngsters and adults this summer through the Upland Recreation Department.

A novel idea that Holstein hopes will become a regular recreation department offering, the camp will take place the week of July 11 at the Bandshell at Memorial Park.

All ages and all skill levels will be taught, and individualized assignments will be designed to help each student progress to the next level of proficiency.

"My dream for the camp is for it to become a well-known and highly qualified guitar experience for young people," Holstein explained.

"But I want it to be a fun experience as well as a learning experience. I hope that by planting a seed in my students I am planting a seed in myself. The challenge is not only to give my students a learning experience but to give myself one too."

Holstein, whose style of music ranges from country, folk and pop to spiritual, blues and ballads, has arranged the camp to conclude with a group concert for family members and friends on the final day of the program.

"I take my music very seriously and I want this camp to be a program where the students will get approximately one years worth of lessons in a week's time. I want to help people be born again as musicians," Holstein said.

"I hope to give beginners a knowledge of chords, scales and rhythm and advanced students a knowledge of melody, advanced scales, transposing, modulating and intros and endings of songs."

Following the conclusion of the Upland Camp, Holstein will conduct a similar program in Chino.

He also hopes to find time this summer to cut his first demonstration tape of original songs and recordings to be used in securing future performance dates.

In reviewing his modest success during the past decade, Holstein admits that it has been no easy struggle.

"It was hard at first," he says. "I had to take odd jobs to pay the bills. But without the backing of my wife I couldn't have done it. My advice to anyone with a dream would be to follow that dream, to build bricks under those dreams and to not be afraid." □

Tax allocations announced

SACRAMENTO — State Controller Kenneth Cory announced the distribution of $5,345,242 to counties and cities as the June apportionment of cigarette tax.

San Bernardino County received $32,400. City allotments were Chino, $8,590; Fontana, $8,399; Montclair, $7,997; Ontario, $20,724; Rancho Cucamonga, $10,796; and Upland, $10,953. The 58 counties' share was $1,058,127 and the cities' share totaled $4,287,115.

This distribution represents 30 percent of the revenue deposited in the Cigarette Tax Fund during the month of May, 1983, less the State's administrative costs of $39,652 and the withholding of $653,585 under a recently enacted state law.

Tough times facing local lemon farms

By David Miller

A worldwide citrus glut continues to spell trouble for local lemon growers.

Many of the growers, crippled by the weight of precariously low prices, are unable to meet their picking and transportation costs; and some have been forced to let their acreage lie idle in the face of ever-growing international competition.

In a boom year for what has been termed the "classic cyclical commodity," the fortunes of local lemon growers have gone from shaky to sour. For some, with the threat of continuing low prices for some time to come, things could get much worse.

Lemon sales tend to flow with the weather. The peak months are from mid-June to mid-August, and the volume sold tends to rise with summer temperatures.

In 1983, 23 countries actively produce lemons, compared to only a handful not too long ago.

In years where there are shortages of the fruit, high prices encourage growers to plant new trees, and with the increased volume prices drop, forcing many growers to later pull out their plantings. This eventually leads to another shortage, which drives prices back up and encourages more plantings, and the cycle continues.

The cycle is sometimes interrupted by harsh weather conditions such as a freeze, but that has not occurred during the last several years. Except for this year's storms, which caused some wind damage, recent winters have been so mild that Vignoli says the goal is to get students to print and recognize their name, as well as know all capital letters and numbers up to 20. Like Richardson, she believes children can be taught to learn while playing, which often makes them think they are not working when they technically are.

"We do touch on academics in the summer, because the kids are always touching on colors and shapes and numbers even when they are playing," she says. "When they are doing crafts, they — without realizing it — are going over colors and shapes and numbers. So (learning) is always there."

"But I do think they should have a little break in the summer. Most of our children are all-day children (the school is open daily from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.) and they are here from 8 to 10 hours a day. They are kids, after all, and I don't believe in pushing them every day."

Laying a solid foundation is the philosophy at the California Learning Centers, which has schools in both RC and Upland. In existence for 20 years running, the schools stress the need for children to learn the concepts behind fundamental learning skills.

"We don't just teach academics, we have a developmental program," says director Charlotte Wyckoff.

"We understand that what it takes to make a good kindergarten student is not learning the alphabet. The ABCs is after the fact. It is not laying a foundation for the kindergartener."

Instead, Wyckoff says, the California Learning Centers stress motor development and conceptualization among the 50 preschool students currently involved in the program.

According to Wyckoff, the CLC philosophy is to develop the tools that the youngsters will need to be able to understand what they are taught later on. As at other schools, this means that the children often learn while they play.

"The child just sees it as fun," Wyckoff says. "But they might be playing a game that builds memory." □

Smog inspections begin in 1984

Mandatory biennial vehicle emission inspections are scheduled to begin in California in 1984, with the goal of significantly cleaning up the air in the state's major metropolitan areas.

Up to six million cars in California will be inspected annually to determine whether they meet auto exhaust emission standards. The inspection program is expected to reduce vehicle-caused pollution by as much as 25 percent by 1987.

Inspections will be required in areas exceeding federal air quality standards, if local authorities request the program. To date, the Los Angeles area, the San Francisco Bay area, Ventura County, San Diego County and the Sacramento metropolitan area have requested that cars be inspected every two years prior to renewal of their registrations.

"Vehicle inspection provides us with a major method of reducing air pollution, and that means better health for Californians. Through this program, consumers will have the opportunity to improve their environment, as well as affect their own health in a positive way," said Marie Shibuya-Snell, director of the California Department of Consumer Affairs. The Bureau of Automotive Repair, which is part of the Department of Consumer Affairs, is administering the program.

Shibuya-Snell added, "There is no question that air pollution is unhealthy. It can make breathing difficult, aggravate cardiovascular and respiratory illnesses, and damage the lungs. In fact, studies indicate that air pollution may contribute to the development of diseases such as emphysema, chronic bronchitis and cancer. In addition, children and senior citizens are particularly vulnerable to the harmful effects of air pollution."

The most dangerous pollutants cars give off are carbon monoxide (CO) and hydrocarbons (HC). The California Air Resources Board estimates that the vehicle inspection program will reduce CO emission by at least 1,500 tons a day, and HC emissions by more than 100 tons a day.

Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odorless and poisonous gas. It can affect the blood, reducing the amount of oxygen reaching the heart, brain and there has been continual growth, contributing to the boom.

Citrus glut spells trouble for local lemon growers

Locally, the climate usually causes fruit to mature several months too early, forcing area growers out of the market before the peak period. International growers, primarily in Italy and Spain, have found lemons so popular and expenses so low in comparison to their competitors in the U.S. that they have increased their production drastically. Some of the fruit currently being sold on the East Coast, an area once monopolized by U.S. producers, arrived from out of the country.

The strength of the U.S. dollar vis-a-vis European currency has paradoxically led European customers to turn to their neighbors for their lemons — which they can obtain for roughly half the price they pay for American citrus.

At home, local growers have a difficult enough time competing with others in the western region of California and Arizona. The area from La Verne to Etiwanda comprises only about one percent of the nation's western citrus-bearing acreage.

Climate conditions cause local fruit to mature far too early to allow growers here to compete in even the national market. Lemons that cannot be sold fresh can be sold to the products market (juice, concentrates), but juice returns to growers are presently so low ($20 per ton of lemons) that they are usually not enough to pay their own way in picking and transportation costs, currently about $60.

Unfortunately, says Bruce Goetting, manager of the Upland Lemon Growers Association, about 75 percent of all local production is destined for the products market this year.

While growers who plan to stay in the business are already making preparations for next year, Goetting says the long-range outlook for local growers continues to look "bad."

Goetting has previously warned that locals are threatened by another phenomenon: regional housing development. It seems that citrus and people are both lured by the same warm weather conditions.

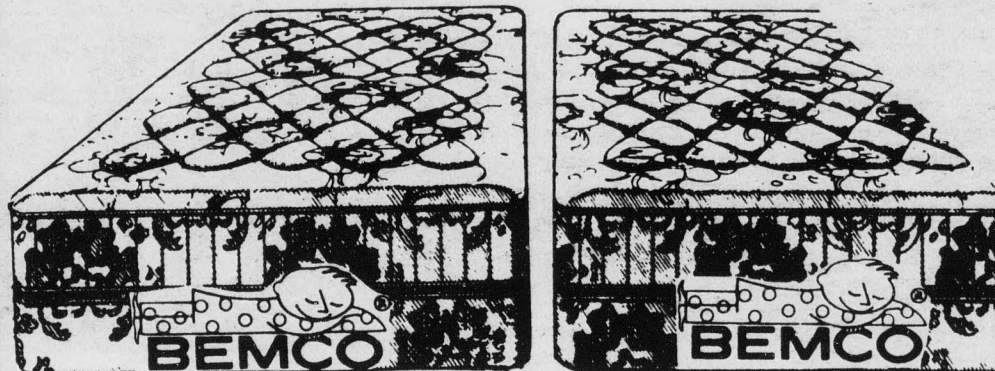

Only time will tell how severe the effects of the current glut will be, Goetting says. About the only thing that will cure the locals' woes in the short run would be a decrease in worldwide production and a hoped-for corresponding rise in prices, but according to Goetting, such a swing in the cycle could take years.

"A reduction in acreage would cure some of the problems, but the only way to do that would be to have a severe freeze," he says. "Otherwise the glut would only end during a gradual decline."

"If we had a freeze next year, it could take only one year; but if not, it could be 20 years." □ other body tissues. Carbon monoxide can cause drowsiness, dizziness or headaches, which can impair a motorist's judgment and coordination when driving.

Hydrocarbons form with nitrogen dioxide, another pollutant from vehicles, to make smog, which can cause headaches, eye discomfort and chest pains and make breathing more difficult.

Shibuya-Snell also noted that air pollution can be harmful to plant life, injuring leaves, reducing yield and quality, and even killing plants. Studies show that in certain smoggy areas, air pollution has reduced the productivity of orange trees by approximately 50 percent, potato production by 40 percent, and grape production by 60 percent.

Other benefits will also accrue from the inspection program, according to Shibuya-Snell. "The maintenance required by the inspections will improve fuel economy and make the cars run better. The potential savings in gasoline consumption translates into a savings of up to $23 a year for motorists."

Shibuya-Snell noted that while cars in recent years have been built to meet increasingly stringent emission standards, they need regular maintenance to continue to run cleanly.

The inspections and repairs will be done in auto repair shops that volunteer to be licensed for the purpose by the Bureau of Automotive Repair. The bureau estimates that approximately 7,500 such stations will be licensed in the state.

Fees for the inspections will be set by the free market competition among shops, and are expected to be about $15-$20. Adjustments or repairs to cars that fail the exhaust emissions test are limited to $50. However, emission control equipment that is missing or has been tampered with must be replaced with no limit on the cost. □

An Edison Energy Survey Of Your Home Can Save You Energy And Money, Too.

The Wests, Lineaus and Reutters are just three examples of Edison customers who significantly reduced their energy consumption and costs following a free home energy survey of their homes by Southern California Edison energy specialists.

If you're looking for ways to reduce your monthly electric bills, you can arrange a free energy survey of your home today.

All you do is call the toll-free number indicated below or fill in the coupon and send it to us.

We'll call you and set up an appointment at a time that's convenient for you. A trained Edison specialist will visit your home and do a personalized, computerized energy survey which will clearly identify steps you can take to make your home more energy efficient. The survey takes only about an hour.

Many energy conservation methods we recommend cost little or nothing. For instance, Mr. and Mrs. Edward West reported savings by following such simple measures as air-drying dishes in the dishwasher and using their fire-place rather than their heating system.

Of course, other savings were affected by installation of more energy-efficient devices in the home. The Wests installed an evaporative cooler and also weatherstripped and caulked their home. The Lineaus, after their audit, added two desert coolers to their cooling system and reduced their hot weather bills 40%. The Reutters insulated their attic and wrapped their ducts and water heater. They expect a reduction of $170 in their electric bills.

Chances are, a free energy survey will save you energy and money.

This summer, if you choose to install energy-saving devices in your home following an Edison survey, you also may be eligible for hundreds of dollars in cash rebates on energy savers listed here. Or you may qualify for low, 8% interest financing with no down payment and up to eight years to repay. Also, you may be eligible for state or federal tax credits on these expenditures.

Here's a list of rebates available:

Roller rink suffers a summer slump

By Matt Coker

Summertime.

It conjures up thoughts of picnicking, catching a game at the ball park, browning under the sun near masses of water and vacationing with loved ones.

But Upland's Richard Chado wishes summer were the one to take a vacation. While other attractions draw flocks of folks, this is the worst time of the year for Chado's Roller City at the corner of Vineyard Avenue and Foothill Boulevard in Rancho Cucamonga.

"Now we work harder than ever to get people in here," Chado sighed.

Besides competing with weather, which makes most people want to play outdoors, the roller skating rink must contend with the major amusement park promotions that draw their biggest crowds of the year.

"You'd think people would want out of the sun and into the rink," he said. "That's true with a hot summer. But it has been mild this year."

And other indoor attractions are packing them in as well. Now that Hollywood is creating better film crops, theaters are finding more people willing to pay $4.50 a seat.

In the West Valley, summer can be a less than pleasant experience. The thermometer's mercury threatens to spurt out the top and the yearly pollution makes outdoor exercise an endangered species.

That is where Chado's rink has a great deal to offer — especially to those into breathing. Carpeted walls, new skates to rent, an outrageous stereo system and — best of all — air conditioning greet roll-around-the-rinkers.

Besides his Rancho Cucamonga locale, Chado owns Roller City in Glendora and 2001, The Rink of the Future in Riverside (it is run by computers). Chado also hopes to open a rink in Oceanside.

The Rancho Cucamonga and Glendora rinks can accommodate 1,300 skaters while the three-year-old Riverside skating surface can handle 1,700.

Chado said it was only a few years ago, when disco dancing was big, that he would "open the doors and get out of the way" to avoid being trampled by the crowds.

"Now you open the doors and you have to go out and get them to come in," Chado said. "You have to prove you're entertaining."

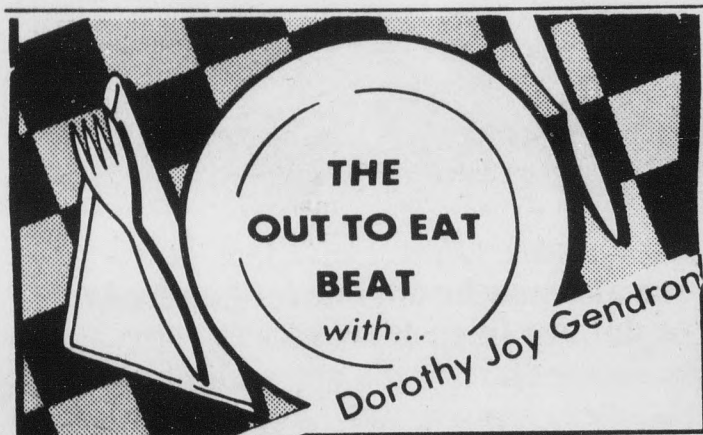

"This year we're going to weed out the men from the boys" as far as rink owners go, he said. "A lot of inexperienced people have gone into the business that are not going to be with us soon."

This threat does not bother Chado, who said he "almost expects" the decline in patronage. "They'll be back," he shrugs with confidence.

With the exception of his oldest daughter, Bobbie Lou, who lives in San Bernardino with her husband, Chado's other three offspring operate his

I'm sure you've noticed this week's addition to our weekly papers, a cookbook section.

Now I will be the very last one to advocate cooking at home, but face it, we are all forced to at one time or another. I'm just kidding, I really do enjoy cooking, all you have to do is ask my husband who has threatened to become a tall, fat person.

Back to the business at hand. Some of our local restaurants have advertised in the Cookbook tab and they want you to try the recipes that are published. If you happen to have any questions about the recipes, don't call me, drop in to that particular restaurant and ask them.

Le Bistro at 1964 W. Foothill at the corner of Central and Foothill in Upland wants you to try the poached salmon with tarragon and mustard sauce. I might suggest that you clip the recipe, then go to Le Bistro and order that particular dish so you'll know how it should taste before you cook it.

Pollicelli's Italian Restaurant and Market presents a sausage casserole that sounds just yummy and it does look easy, especially if the cook happens to work all day.

Pollicelli's can be found at 4234 Holt Blvd. in Montclair, do visit the market for all your Italian goodies then stop at the restaurant and tell Nick I sent you.

Puff 'n Porridge's Mary Eliason wants to share a family recipe with you. The Peruvian stew sounds great, not expensive and quite simple. If you require more instructions drop in at Puff 'n Porridge at 1667 Mountain in Upland in the Northwest Center.

The catfish soup recipe presented by Socorro's sounds good but only if you like catfish. Cora Socorro tells me it is very good but you won't find it on the menu at the restaurant. If you have any questions about the ingredients just drop in at Socorro's at 10276 Foothill Blvd. in Rancho Cucamonga and ask Cora.

Griswold's Bakery has to have the most enticing aroma in the area. All you have to do is walk in and your diet and all good intentions fly out the window. The fabulous cakes, pies, cookies, sweet rolls and bread are just more than a body can bear. Now Griswold's Bakeries are introducing their new European pasty chef, Art Miltenberger with his special recipe for whipped cream pound cake. It sounds like a dessert that could become habit forming.

Griswold's Bakery can be found at 555 Foothill Blvd. in Claremont.

Roller rink experiences summer decline in patrons

His son, Dickey, 28, manages the Riverside rink. An outstanding roller skater, Dickey was voted most valuable player in the U.S. roller hockey league this year. He first put on a pair of skates at age 8.

But if he were to race his brother Tony, 20, it might turn out to be a tossup. Tony is an excellent roller hockey player himself and he also finds time to manage the Glendora rink.

Daughter Judy Lynn, 25, has managed Rancho Cucamonga's Roller City for about 1½ years. She began at Glendora's concession stand at 12. "I've been here so long it doesn't seem any different than home away from home," Judy Lynn said from the box office.

"I always took this for granted, like toilet paper, until I became manager," she admitted. "Now I just have more responsibility. Everyone yells at me."

Judy Lynn said she was an award-winning speed skater and often competed in regional meets until she was 14.

"My job is to troubleshoot," Chado said. "I spend a lot of time going from place to place. I usually end up at all three places by the time the day is over."

Chado added, "I thought it would be easier when I got older, but I put in more hours now than I ever did."

Chado, who says he's been in the roller skating business 30 years, attended the University of Iowa where he majored in business and physical education. At the same time, he ran roller rinks while pursuing a career as a high school basketball coach.

But he instead followed the footsteps of his father, who was a rink owner, and opened skating rinks, miniature golf courses and driving ranges in Dodge and Mason City, Iowa, with his wife.

While Chado spun records, his wife sold tickets in the box office and then ran over to tend the concession stand. A crowd of a couple hundred people was a good night in those days, he said.

In 1960, the Chado family came to California because "that was where the action and all the people were." After opening the Glendora rink that year, his plan was to stay for 10 years and head back home.

Glendora's Roller City was much bigger than the Iowa rinks because "we'd rather show a lot of people a good time rather than special cliques. We're into entertaining masses of people."

Before Chado bought his Rancho Cucamonga building in 1971, it was a bowling alley. But the notorious mudslide of 1969 gutted the odd-shaped building, which was built in the mid-1960s.

It took Chado a year to clean things up and redecorate the structure to conform to his roller rink plans. After bulldozing most of the mud out, Chado said refurbishing the building was like starting from scratch.

One of the problems was "hippies" who lived in the building in between the flooding and the time Chado bought the place, he said.

"They took toilets, they took sprinkler heads, they took doors," Chado said. "Everything you see now was brand new then."

Also stolen was $80,000 worth of copper tubing used in the building's air conditioning system, he said.

That Chado would buy a building which had been through so much surprised many, but he said he had his reasons.

"I heard floods are only supposed to come through here every 30 years," he said. "I figured I'd be all right."

Chado became well-respected in the community as he enforced strict dress codes and rules such as no smoking under 18 at his rink. Those rules still stand.

"I remember the trend of hair real long," he said. "I received an award from the American Legion for standing up and saying let boys look like boys and girls look like girls."

"How would it look if a guy got off a motorcycle in jeans with hair down to his mid back when you're trying to draw families?"

Though he'd rather be at the rink with classmates at a school party, 12-year-old John Wagner, who will attend Cucamonga Junior High next fall, said the rink is "exciting because of the lights and everything." As he sat with friend Jamie Lisner, 11, also of Rancho Cucamonga, other youths swarmed onto the floor during a follow-the-leader game. Wagner said he likes staying inside because "I'm real sensitive to smog."

Lisner said he likes the rink for other reasons. "If you try skating on the sidewalk, those little lines make you fall down sometimes," Lisner said. "They don't have those lines in here."

Barring a reservation of the rink by a private party, Roller City is open Tuesday through Sunday afternoons from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Monday and Tuesday nights are usually reserved. Wednesday through Sunday nights the rink is open from 4 to 10 p.m.

Wednesdays from 4 to 10 p.m. is "Bargain Night," where skates and admission cost $2.25. "Where else can you spend $2.25 and have something to do all that time?" Chado asks.

Friday nights feature dancing in socks after 10:30 p.m.

Rodeo stars will test their mettle at the LA County Fair in Pomona

Fast-action events will reign in the grandstand during the PRCA rodeo Sept. 21-25 at the Los Angeles County Fair, Pomona. The fair runs Sept. 15-Oct. 5.

Performances, which will be at 8:30 p.m. each day, will feature saddle bronc riding, bull riding, steer wrestling, team roping, bareback riding and women's barrel racing, according to Cotton Rosser, rodeo producer.

Considered the most dangerous sport and the most thrilling rodeo event, bull riding will spotlight cowboys riding bulls weighing more than 1,500 pounds. The rider must remain on the bull at least eight seconds to receive a score.

Steer wrestling, often called bulldogging, is a timed event in which the contestant leaps from a running horse to the steer's horns, brings the animal to a halt and wrestles it to the ground.

Labeled as the original rodeo event, saddle-bronc riding requires the cowboy to combine timing, rhythm and style. This makes it one of the most difficult feats to learn. For an eight-second ride, the cowboy must hold the rein with one hand and spur the horse in a rhythmic stride.

Bareback riding is similar to saddle bronc riding, but no stirrups, reins or saddle are used. A "rigging," a leather sursingle, is cinched on the bronc's back for the rider to hold and thus requires a stronger arm than saddle bronc riding.

Team roping calls for a horseman known as a "header" to chase the steer and rope the head, while the "heeler," another rider, throws a loop around the steer's heels. A professional cowboy team can usually rope a steer in less than ten seconds.

Fast horses and cowgirls get involved in the women's barrel racing. The rider must maneuver her horse around barrels set in a cloverleaf pattern while racing against the clock. The winner's time is figured in tenths of seconds.

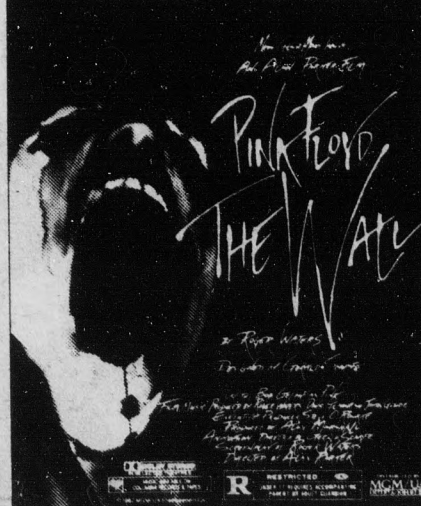

Between events, acts including trick roping, trick riding, barrel racing, animal stunts and clown characters are added for a "wild west show"

Park-goers enjoy active areas

our parks are capable of handling the residents of Upland, but we receive a large number of users from outside the city," says City Parks Superintendent Ken Hatanaka.

Hatanaka estimates that most of the other parks in Upland are used by approximately 10-15,000 people per year. The city has had to limit the number of parks containing restroom facilities due to widespread cases of vandalism. In fact, officials had to construct special stainless steel "anti-vandal" facilities at Memorial Park after frequent attacks in which vandals smashed porcelain sinks and toilets there.

Thornburgh says that in their attempt to lure more people to Sierra Vista and Magnolia, officials have placed much emphasis on making the parks especially attractive to groups, since "there seems to be a big demand" for the accommodation of large numbers of park users.

It is all part of a new philosophy of trying to lure Upland residents to the more "active," rather than "passive" recreational areas. Thornburgh has proposed that four of the city's passive parks be sold off to fund additional projects considered to be far more active.

"My general feeling about it was that we have a tremendous need for active parks areas, away from residential situations where the residents won't be bothered," Thornburgh says.

"People are wanting soccer fields and softball fields and tennis courts. They are wanting to do something when they get to a park other than just sit there."

Thornburgh says he hopes the funds raised by selling the proposed four parks will be used to purchase and develop other active park areas.

The additions to the two parks should be completed by the end of the summer, Thornburgh says. Much of the change involves making the parks more attractive to younger people and families, including what Thornburgh calls "more creative playground equipment." □

Swimming program making big splash in Upland

Story by Joy Sommer

Last year they had one little boy who thought it was fun to go to the bottom and just sit there. This year there is one 3 1/2 year old who has taken to the water like a little dolphin and his instructor has to keep an eagle-eye on him every moment. Then there's the little girl who has no interest in swimming and even less in setting foot in water.

Some find their aquatic feet quickly while others hang back and need a little gentle persuasion.

They come in all shapes and sizes and with varying degrees of skill but the one thing they all have in common is they are enrolled in swimming classes offered through Upland Recreation.

As usual, classes fill fast but Dave Holt, Upland Recreation, said there is still room for intrepid youngsters wishing to either learn or further develop their skills.

From the "Mommy and Me" classes designed for children 2 to 5 and their mothers, to pre-beginners and through all the levels up to the life-saving class, there is something for everyone.

Instructors handle the small classes (in most cases six to nine children) through the six periods each day and then double as guards in the afternoons during the public swim.

Pool Manager Brenda Dircks finds instructing both fun and fulfilling. "I've been doing it for eight years now," she said with a grin. "When I was 15, I told them I was 18 — I did it for three years until I was old enough." This was at another pool.

Dircks has been an instructor guard for Upland for the last two years but this is the first year she has been manager.

"It's a lot more work than I expected but I still teach classes because I really enjoy it."

What's the most fulfilling thing for her? "I just love it when you can take one child that's scared to death and bring them to the point where they try those first few strokes on their own. The look on their faces is really neat to see."

How far can a child come during the two-week session? Dircks says even she is surprised by some of the children. "We have little ones from 'Mommy and Me' who want to go off the high board on the last day. I just hold them and jump with them," she said.

Dave Holt, who does the administration and scheduling for the program, said he felt one reason the Upland program is so successful is that the return ratio of their guards is so high.

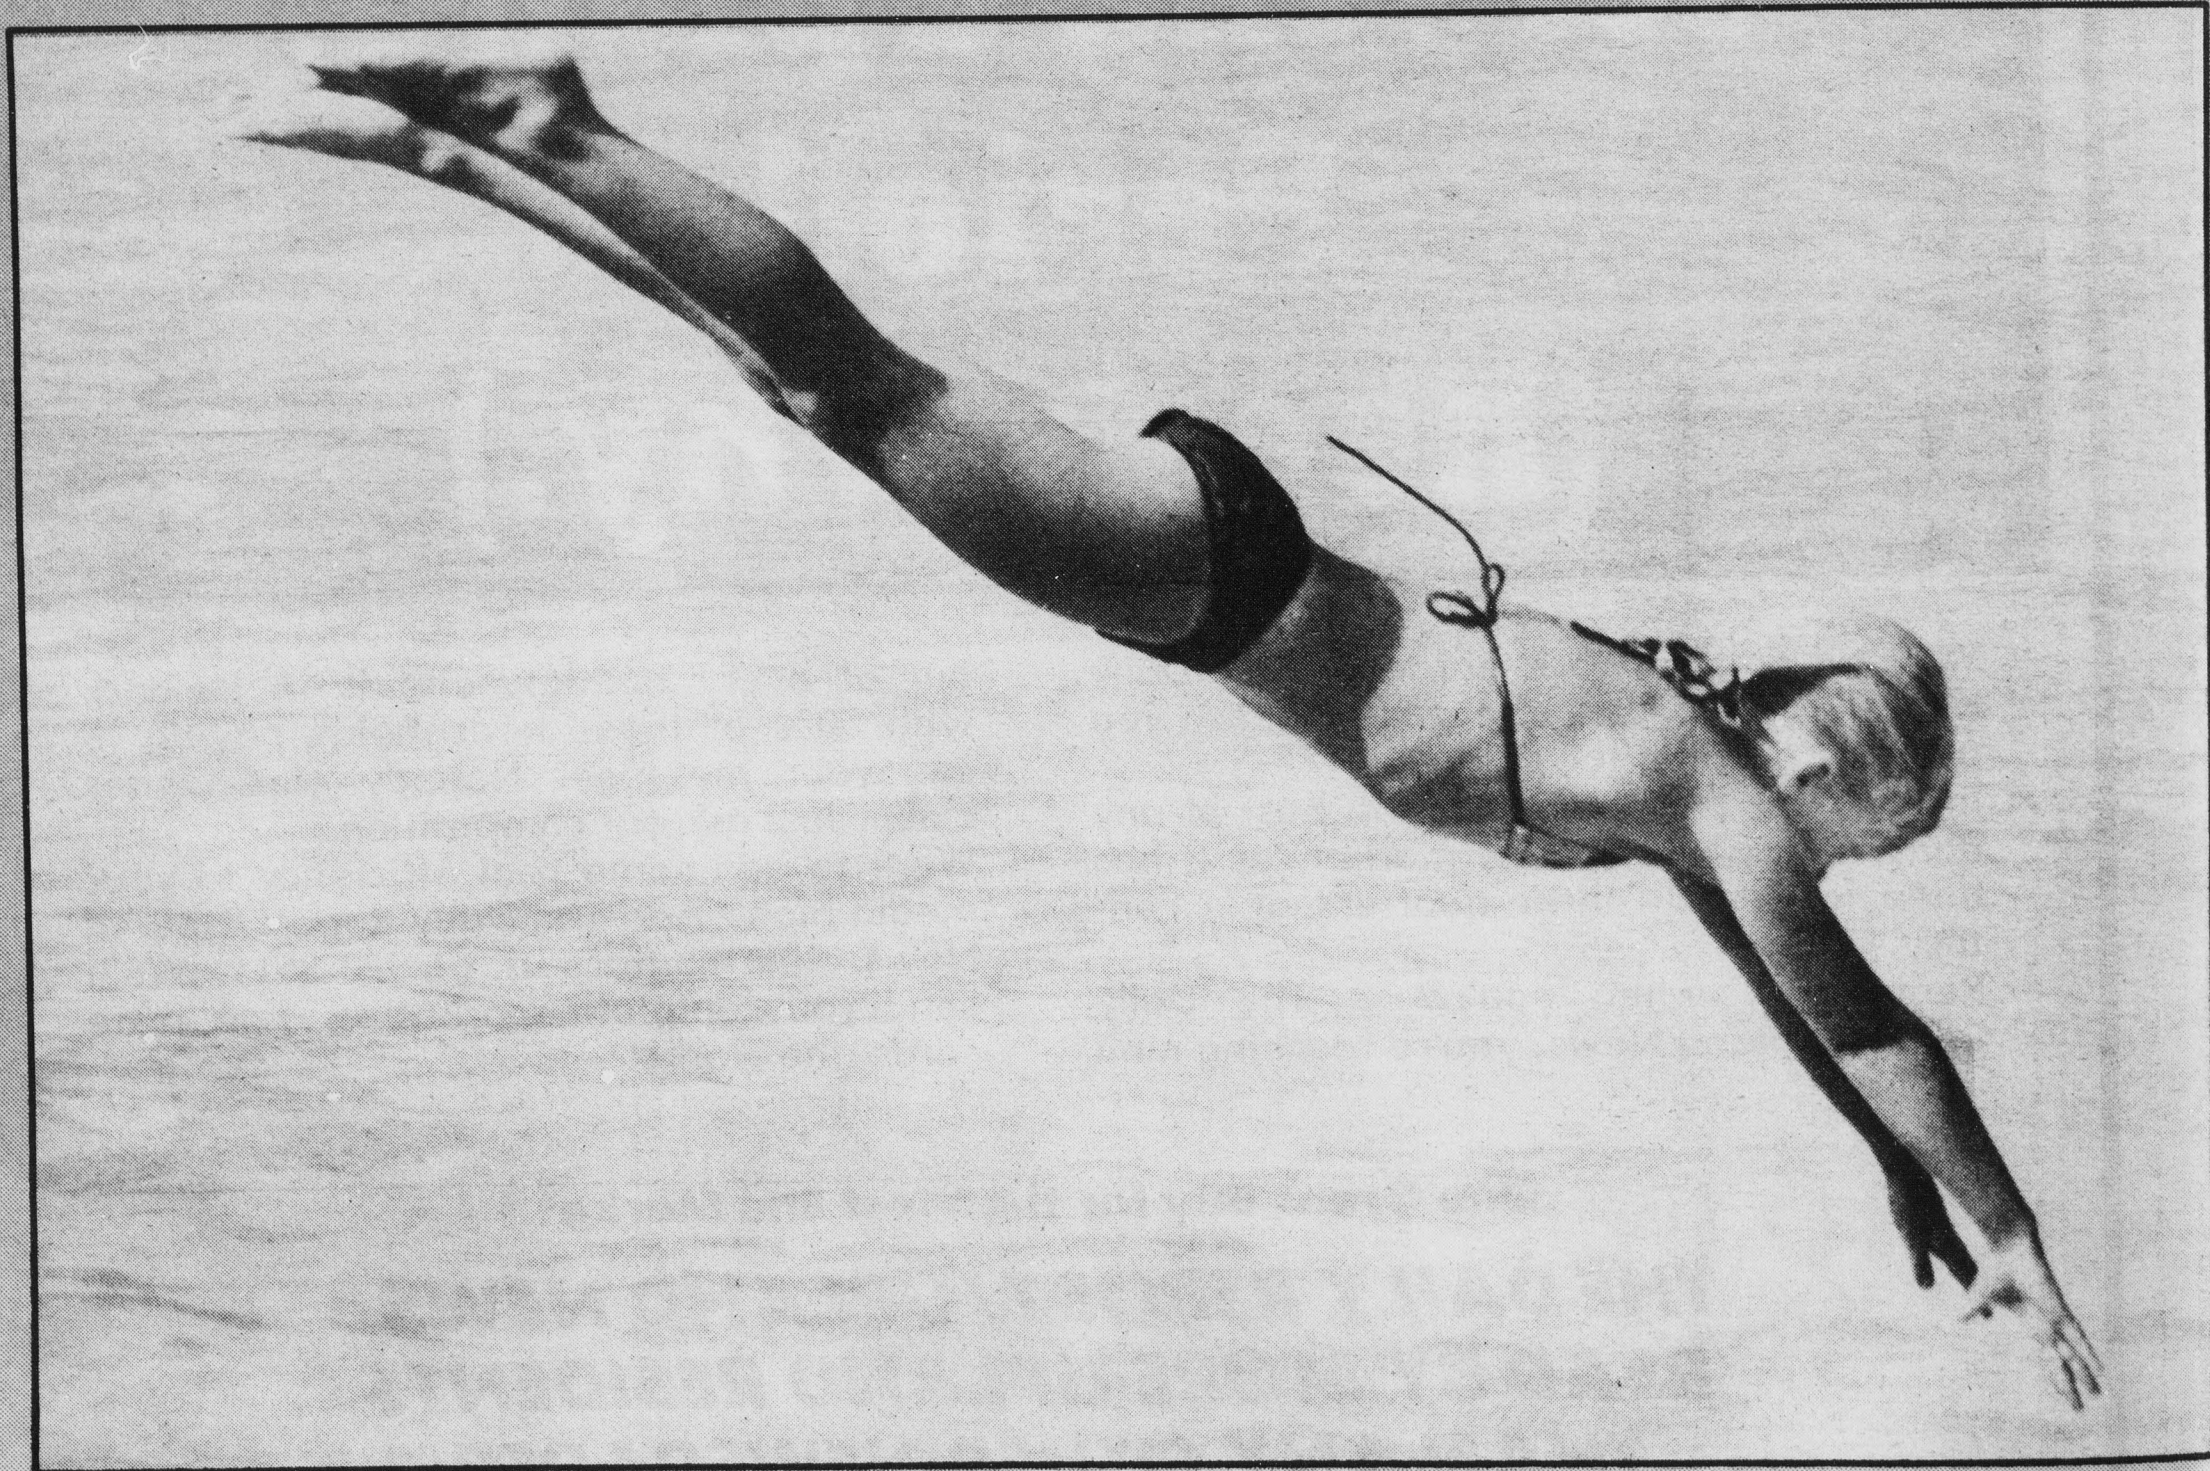

"All of our guards are returnees and many of them have two or three years experience with us," he said. All guards are Red Cross certified and possess certificates in advanced life-saving and CPR.

"We feel really good about our staff — they relate well to the public, spend extra time with the students and are very conscientious. Many of the children advance from one level to another with the same instructor."

Right now there are still opening for Sessions Two through Four and anyone interested can come to the Upland High School Pool to register at 2 p.m. any weekday.

Dircks says she would like to see a class started, if there was enough interest, for children who are mildly disabled. "We could handle a class for children that have seizures or are hyper-active but everytime it's been offered, there were never enough children signed up. We could probably still do it since there are some classes still open if the interest were there."

As for the little boy last year who sat on the bottom, he did learn to swim. "He finally swam on the last day — we told him he couldn't have his card if he didn't," Dircks said.

Learning to swim begins even before you get in the water. The class of beginners (top), under the direction of Brenda Durks, practices proper kicking techniques poolside. Showing her perfect form, a student in the diving class (far left) takes a practice leap. Even underwater, there are certain procedures to follow (above). Some children were born to enjoy the water. If his expression is any indication, David Kim (left) is one of those.

Employee performance is seminar topic

A management workshop titled "New Tools for Improving Employee Performance and Teamwork" will be presented at Chaffey College July 26 from 8:45 a.m. to noon.

Loma Hopkins, manager of several innovative programs at the college, will lead the workshop designed to assist executives, managers, supervisors and personnel officers strengthen employee performance, morale and teamwork.

Hopkins said participants will use management materials published by Performax, Inc. "These management materials are rapidly becoming popular management and counseling tools," she added.

The materials presented in the workshop will also assist participants in career counseling and placement of individuals into positions appropriate for their work styles, Hopkins said.

The instruments to be used in the workshop include the "Personal Profile System," "Job Factor Analysis System" and "Activity Perception System."

The "Personal Profile System" can be used to identify individual work behavioral styles, approach and resistance to change, behaviors used under pressure, an individual's chief value to an organization, how to work more effectively with others and what each individual in an organization needs to be motivated and productive.

The "Job Factor Analysis System" provides a painless method for communicating in minutes performance expectations not found in job descriptions, but which are among the biggest problems for supervisors, especially with new or marginal employees.

This analysis system is effective in conflict resolution, performance appraisals, job training programs, employee selection, improving productivity and developing employee understanding. It clarifies job responsibilities; improves interpersonal relationships; focuses on tasks, not personalities; and helps rate tasks by priority level.

The "Activity Perception System" allows two or more people to compare their views of how certain tasks should be accomplished and to identify the human factor differences in expectations and styles solving problems.

Managers find this system useful in clarifying behaviors an individual needs to emphasize or de-emphasize in job performance. It is also useful in career path planning and team building. Partners in small businesses have found this a beneficial communication and planning tool.

Hopkins, a certified Performax consultant, earned her master's degree at the University of Missouri-Columbia and bachelor's degree at Pomona College. She is a consultant to local business and industry, as well as non-profit human services organizations, and is a frequent speaker at conferences, conventions and service clubs.

She recently received a statewide award for excellence in developing vocational educational services for special needs students in California community colleges. She has authored several career development publications that are distributed and used internationally.

The fee for the workshop, sponsored by Chaffey

College Community Services, is $27.50 and includes all course materials.

The workshop will be held in room 3 of the Forum Building, located at the main Chaffey College campus, 5885 Haven Ave., Alta Loma.

For further information and pre-registration, call the Chaffey College Community Services Office at 987-1737.

The legacy of the Chaffey family

River, which the Chaffeyes ingeniously tapped for irrigation. Mildra is now one of Upland's two sister cities.

The Chaffeyes were probably involved in naming many of our streets. Today, downtown Ontario's main east-west street is Holt Boulevard. But, until 20 or 30 years ago, it was A Street. It was considered part of Valley Boulevard, running from the eastern part of the valley, or beyond, to Los Angeles; a major route.

Going northward in the downtown area, Euclid's cross streets were, and are, named for letters of the alphabet, from A to J. Then came Fourth Street, one mile north of A Street. From there on north, cross streets were numbered, from Fourth to 25th Street, each 1,320 feet (or a quarter mile) from center to center.

West of Euclid, San Antonio, Mountain and Benson avenues were at half-mile intervals. The same was true for Campus and Grove avenues to the east of Euclid. As subdivision progressed, lesser streets were developed between the major ones. And then some changes took place.

Twelfth Street in Upland was renamed Foothill Boulevard. It became part of a popular but devious route from San Bernardino to Los Angeles. For many years, prior to construction of the San Bernardino Freeway, it and Valley Boulevard in Ontario were the only decent routes to Los Angeles, crooked as they were.

Then, 10th Street in Upland became Arrow Highway, a highly touted "direct" route from San Bernardino to Los Angeles. But, any archer who shot an arrow by its wiggly path would have been booted out of Robin Hood's gang of Merry Men at once.

Arrow Highway is a bit of an oddball, as there are two of them in our area. They are parallel, and half a mile apart. The problem begins at Benson Avenue. There, Ontario's Arrow Highway continues west to the Claremont city border, where it becomes Sixth Street, and goes no farther.

Upland's west Eighth Street ends at Benson Avenue, at the Montclair city border, where it becomes Arrow Highway. That one twists and turns for about 25 miles and gets lost, forever, just beyond Baldwin Park. So, from Benson to Claremont, there are two.

I am glad I am not a delivery driver, or a stranger, trying to find an address on one of these two streets with the same name. The engineer responsible must have been lost too, or perhaps it became very smoggy while he was out to lunch. □

Baha'i: an ever-changing religion

By Lauren Richards

Their only temple in this country is in Wilmette, Ill., a nine-sided house of worship that took almost 50 years to construct.

For now, until their numbers and funds increase, they meet in fellow members' homes, at "firesides," where they discuss their faith and religious doctrine.

When describing their beliefs, they often refer to the slogan, "One planet, one people."

They are Baha'is, most often associated with their Iranian counterparts who suffer repression and death at the hands of the Shi'i Islamic government there.

The faith is perhaps the world's newest monotheistic religion, only 138 years old. Founded by Husayn-'Ali, or Baha'u'llah (the Glory of God), the Baha'i faith stresses the unity of religion, man and God.

Followers of the Baha'i faith (pronounced Ba-hi-ee) are not exclusively Iranian; there are temples for Baha'i worshipers in 135 countries around the world.

Locally, there are Baha'i assemblies in Ontario, Montclair, Rancho Cucamonga, Pomona and Claremont, with at least nine Baha'is in each.

The faith's tie to Islam, particularly its origins in Iran, is a major factor of the followers' persecution by the Iranian government. (In other Islamic nations, Baha'is are not persecuted).

The Islamic Republic of Iran recognizes only Islam, Judaism and Christianity as religions of God; thus, the government views followers of the Baha'i faith as subversives or heretics.

Ironically, the faith requires that its followers obey their governments while at the same time remaining essentially apolitical. American Baha'is, for example, remain non-partisan, never joining political parties.

The Baha'i faith is strikingly similar to Christianity, Islam and Judaism and uses much of the doctrines found in those religions.

"Most Christians (interested in the Baha'i faith) are attempting to disprove the Baha'is and confirm Christianity: What they find, though, is complete agreement," said Rich Andre, a former Christian and a member of the Ontario Baha'i Assembly.

After his conversion to the Baha'i faith, Andre said he was disturbed when he visited Christian churches; not because of the teachings, but because ministers do not offer their congregations the opportunity to question interpretations.

"All historical religions have an inherent claim on the truth. The Baha'i faith requires independent investigation, though," Andre said.

With independent investigation, prospective followers are required to "seek the truth" and openly question the validity of all religions.

"We don't have any rituals such as baptism...but we do require independent investigation before someone becomes a Baha'i," Andre said.

Imbedded in the idea of independent investigation is the notion of educated followers. Societies prior to the prophecies of Baha'u'llah did not have the resources for such investigation, and had to rely on the priests or ministers who were the educated members of the societies.

With widespread education, the Baha'is see no further need for priesthood positions and instead organize the religion with assemblies of nine

Welcome respite for Scot trainer

By Ron Witt

Upland High School's training room is quiet now and proprietor Charlie Martinez, who must contend with the hubbub that accompanies the opening of his office each day of the school year, seems to welcome the respite.

"When you start in August and finish in May," says Martinez, paying homage to the rare peaceful moment, "you're ready to take a breather."

"But it's fun," the 5-foot-2, 140-pound dynamo hastens to add. "It becomes a job sometimes, but the fun overrides the headaches that come with it."

Martinez, himself an Upland graduate (1962) and former CIF champion in wrestling, recently completed his 10th year as the trainer of Highlander athletes since taking over for Jack Vermillion in 1973.

He gets the chance to relax for two months before another football season rolls around in August. Later, when school begins, athletes from cross country, water polo and other programs will frequent the training room.

Things can get a little hectic.

"You have so many athletes here," relates Martinez. "It seems like you're going several directions at the same time. You can spread yourself a little thin."

Fortunately, the entire workload doesn't fall on Martinez' shoulders only. He receives help from at least three student trainers.

"I like to start them early (in high school)," says Charlie. "Then, by the time they're juniors and seniors, they can really handle things."

A typical school day for Martinez begins at 7:30 a.m., when he arrives on campus to check on equipment and attend to some paper work.

"Basically, the day goes by real fast," says Charlie. "Pretty soon it's sixth period, and then all the kids come in."

"We're here for all the home events, both boys and girls," he emphasizes. "We used to cover the boys away, but not anymore since. It keeps you going," he smiles.

Have the athletes changed over the years?

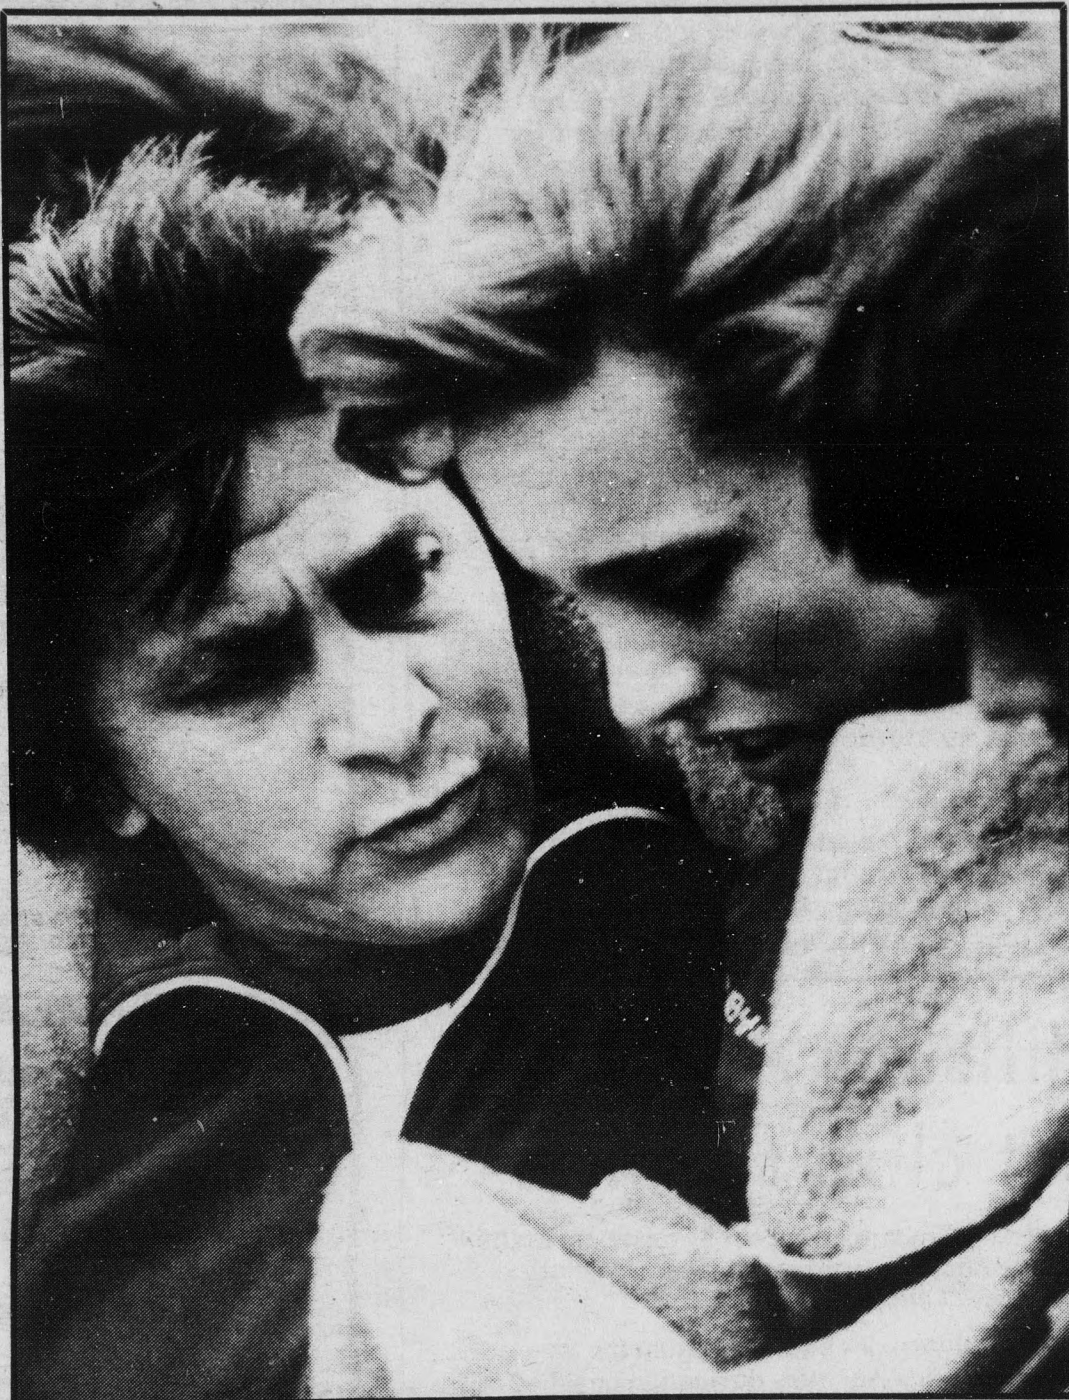

"Yes...and no," Martinez hedges with a chuckle. "They're still pretty good kids. They drive me up the wall sometimes. That's why I'm getting gray."

Martinez' duties don't differ much from previous years, but demands on his expertise are greater.

"When I first started, the girls' program was limited to G.A.A. (Girls' Athletic Association)," recalls Charlie, who admits to age "39 and holding."

"But then the girls moved into CIF. The kids play harder (now) to stay up with the competition. They

LL District 23 pairings set

Pairings have been announced for the District 23 Little League Tournament, which begins Tuesday, July 19.

Fifteen all-star teams are slated for competition at two sites — Latimer Field in Ontario and Byron Cunningham Field at Kennedy Park in Montclair.

Four games are on tap opening day of the tourney. Latimer contests send Ontario International vs. Chino American (5:30 p.m.) and Chino National vs. Ontario Western (8), and Cunningham tilts pit Ontario Mountain View vs. Upland National (5:30) and Ontario Central vs. Chino Hills (8).

On Wednesday, July 20, it will be Montclair Eastern facing Montclair National at 5:30 and Upland American taking on Ontario Eastern at 8 at Latimer Field. Ontario National meets Montclair Central at 5:30 at Cunningham.

Upland Foothill will be the last team to make its tourney debut, meeting the Ontario National-Montclair Central winner at 5:30 p.m. Thursday, July 21, at Cunningham.

The double-elimination tournament continues through Saturday, July 30, with the winner advancing to the Section 6 Tournament Aug. 1-6 at Cunningham Field.

Overley big winner in golf tourney

Sandy Overley was the big winner at the first Rancho Cucamonga Chamber of Commerce Golf Tournament held recently at Red Hill Country Club.

Not only was she a member of the winning foursome — which included Gene Overley, Dr. Paul Umof and Wayne Scarcey — but Overley also won a $500 prize for getting a hole-in-one on the 131-yard 10th hole.

The Overley-Overley-Umof-Scarcey team turned in a best-ball score of 64 to win the first-ever event.

Finishing second in the field of 80 golfers was the First Interstate Bank of Pomona team of Jim Fettig, Mark Lotich, Fernando Ledesma and Pete Verderber. The group had a 65.

Overley took home a gold-plated putter for winning the Closest to the Hole competition with her ace on the 10th hole.

Overley, a Red Hill member and Rancho Cucamonga resident, came within a foot of adding a new car to her winnings.

National Little League

Fourteen players have been chosen to the Upland National Little League all-star team slated for action later this month.

The UNLL squad, managed by Roy Schwarzer and coached by Lee Palmer and Bill Ferguson, includes players Vince Arias, Anthony Blanchard, Pete Burks, Frank Cavallo, Eric Chamarro, Bobby Charlebois, Tige Ferguson, Damon Gomez, Leo Johnson, Mark Lopez, Bobby Luna, Jeff Schwarzer, Cesar Vargas and Robbie White.

Upland National was the 1982 District 23 champion. The team opens defense of its crown at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 19, facing Ontario Mountain View at Montclair's John F. Kennedy Park (Cunningham Field).

In regular-season ending action, meantime, Anthony's Furniture whipped Chick's Sporting Goods 7-0 in playoff between respective first- and second-half winners in the Major division.

Anthony's had posted an impressive 14-4 record during the season to lead all teams. Chick's had finished 12-5.

Mark Lopez pitched and batted Anthony's to the win, striking out 14 Chick's batters and contributing a three-run homer to his team's cause.

Ray Hernandez, Galo Lopez, Eric Rentmeester and Jeff Schwarzer also had hits for the winners, while Dennis Gross, Robbie Luna and Steve Mossberg hit safely for the losers.

Also contributing to Anthony's championship were Frank Cavallo, Damon Gomez, Frank Hernandez, Phillip Merancio, Allan Hebbert, Andy Hernandez and Matt Sievers.

Anthony's begins city playoff competition at 5:30 p.m. Saturday when it hosts Montclair National's representative at Hargis Field, corner of Eighth Street and Sultana Avenue, in Upland.

On the Minor division front, Upland Sizzler Steak House emerged the champion by edging Crown Toyota 8-7. Both teams had 15-3 records going in as Sizzler won the West Division and Crown Toyota the East.

Catcher Chris Burnell slammed a triple and single to lead Sizzler. Winning pitcher Jason Boseant, Aaron Brooks, Aaron Gomez, John Lastoskie, Konan Martin and Stephen Schwarzer added hits for the winners, whose remaining squad members include Jay Allis, Tony Alvarez, Brian Shenton, David Stone and Jamie Siegrist.

Following are final standings for the Upland National regular-season races:

Thirteen-player all-star teams have been selected for each of three divisions in Upland Hilltoppers girls' softball.

Picked to the major division team are Tina Ramirez, Cessy Duran, Barbara Robles, Melanie Maksin, Deann Dixon, Shellie Martin, Vicki Brim, Lisa Stratton, Angie Koontz, Melissa Acosta, Angel Brewster, Joy Coppola and Tanya Schrader.

Comprising the minor division squad are Crystal Beringer, Page Inman, Sandy Russell, Stephanie Carter, Joanna Sanchez, Francine Martin, Nyoka Ackley, Cindy Rivera, Kathy Trombly, Yvette Ramirez, Jennifer Monroe, Marlene Guillory and Kim Nusky.

Rounding out the all-star picks are those from the mini-minor division, including Dana Nelson, Jennifer Sloman, Michele Marquez, Beth Copeland, Jennifer Cushnie, Kelly Vicente, Lydia Mora, Deena Schwary, Mary Plotkin, Elizabeth Ferguson, Stephanie Campbell, Sherise Rickett and Jennifer Senft.

Hilltopper all-star teams will be competing in three tournaments — their own beginning Saturday, the Norco Tournament starting July 22 and the Montclair Tournament opening Aug. 1.

Triathlon trio back in action at Carlsbad

A former Chaffey College threesome, triumphant as a team in competition at Long Beach two weeks ago, looks for additional success Saturday in a similar event at Carlsbad.

Kristi Ericson and Chris Rambas of Upland and Jeanette Bonham of Ontario will join forces again after winning the Bud Light United States Triathlon June 25. What made their feat remarkable was that none had previous triathlon experience.

A triathlon consists of swimming, biking and running events. Ericson, 20, swam two kilometers at Long Beach; Rambas, 22, pedaled 40 kilometers on a bicycle, and Bonham, 19, ran a 9.3-mile course.

Winning had not been the avowed purpose of the trio entering the Long Beach event, but it turned out to be frosting on the cake for the competitors.

Ericson, former member of Upland High School and Chaffey College swim teams, challenged the ocean currents and built up confidence by passing male competitors in the water.

Rambas, an aerobics instructor, navigated the bicycle course's sharp turns and felt generally good afterwards. She had trained by riding 25 miles per day for three weeks.

Bonham, an ice skating enthusiast who turned to running a year ago, also was in good shape for her event, having trained with 10-mile runs each day.

Bonham may have summed up the trio's feelings about triathlon competition when she said, "I thought it was kind of crazy, but it would be fun."

Scaletta on U.S. roster vs. Mexico

Upland's Tom Scaletta returned to Southern California today along with his American teammates for a 7 p.m. battle with the visiting Mexico All-Stars at Anaheim Stadium.

It's the first of two exhibition games slated between the two clubs, the second set for Veteran's Memorial Stadium in the City of Commerce tomorrow (7 p.m. start).

The USA squad is coming off a scheduled seven-game series in Japan. Along with Scaletta, a member of the Cal Poly Pomona NCAA Division II national championship team in 1983, the USA roster includes Eric Fox of Fresno State, Doug Henry of Arizona State and Todd Burns of Oral Robert University.

Coaches during the series with Mexico include Bob Bennette (CS Fresno), Robert Sapp (Middle Georgia College) and Jim Mallon (Southwestern University, Texas).

Mexico, playing its first game, is led by pitchers Felipe Zavala and Alejandro Rico and infielders Ruben Perez and Alberto Armas.

The head coach for Mexico is Ramon Sanchez, assisted by Roberto Sandoval.

Earlier this season, the USA team played a seven-game series against Korea in the St. Louis area, with the Americans coming away with a 4-2-1 mark against the visitors.

Martinez welcomes summer

put out more effort, and in turn, there are more injuries."

The most difficult injuries to deal with, Charlie says, are those involving the head and neck.

"They can happen in any sport," he notes. "Over the years I've had very few that required hospitalization, though. I've been very fortunate."

Martinez didn't always want to be a trainer. After a glossy high school wrestling career in which he never lost a match in dual meet competition (at 98 and 106 pounds) and also played football four years (safety, tailback), Charlie went on to barber school.

He was into barbering for seven years and had aspirations of buying his own shop, then decided against the move.

"You had to be open on Sundays," he remembers none too fondly, "and there were price wars. I was going to open my own shop, but then I didn't."

Martinez made stops at Bonita and San Dimas high schools before coming to Upland. He learned athletic training through night courses and tips from local fellow trainers as Ken Brooks, Chaffey College's Red Hunter and Vermillion.

He's glad to be where he is. "I love the school and the kids," says Charlie with obvious pride. "We have a good administration and coaching staff. I've been around 10 years, and if I didn't like it, I wouldn't be here."

Some collegiate openings have beckoned him along the way, but Martinez has been content to stay at Upland.

"There have been a few college jobs that have opened up," he says, "but I've preferred this situation because of the people here, the athletes and the closeness to the school. In college, you do a lot of traveling and you're gone on Saturdays."

Might he ever consider a collegiate offer? "I'm not ready for that right now," he declares. "It would have to be a very good offer."

Martinez' focus is on his family, including wife Rachel, daughters Linda, 17, a senior at Alta Loma High; Charlene, 13, an eighth grader at Cucamonga Junior High, and Carlos, 8, who will be in third grade in September.

"Linda's on the drill team, and Charlene went out for basketball this year," he informs. "Carlos just likes to play around, and I don't push him into any sport."

Carlos is already doing his part for Upland High athletics. He and Petey Raisbeck, son of former UHS athletic director Peter Raisbeck, are the ball boys at Upland football games.

"He can't wait for the season to start," Charlie says with a grin. "He's asking me in May how soon the season starts."

Right now, Martinez spends his free time at home or hunting, fishing and gardening. But he is hoping his routine will change markedly in the summer of 1984.

"I've got my paperwork done for the Olympics in Los Angeles," he informs. "There are a lot of real good trainers trying for the same jobs, but I hope I can land one."

Astros ready for English journey

Sixteen members of the Upland Astros Soccer Club are gearing up to play their favorite game in England next month.

The Astros, coached by Pete Norell and Bill Hopkins, will visit the country Aug. 5-21. Various fund-raising projects are going into defraying team expenses for the trip.

Players slated to make the trip include Kyle Brinkworth, Cory Christianson, Andy Clack, David Condino, Jason Hoover, Sean Hopkins, Michael Jackson, Brandon Lee, Luis Lopez, Dean Macaluso, Eric Martinez, Andrew Norell, John Sanhamel, Eric Takeuchi, Cesar Vargas and Mike Yegge.

Persons or businesses interested in contributing to the team's travel fund should call Norell at 985-1644 or Hopkins at 981-1231.

Baha'is: their faith builds upon many others

elected followers.

Assemblies exist on the local and national level, with the faith's world headquarters located in Haifa, Israel, where the faith's founder was once placed in exile.

Ray Talleur, a member of the Rancho Cucamonga Assembly, explained that the Baha'is see their religion as a natural progression of the religion of God.

Briefly, their doctrine professes that beginning with Judaism and the prophecies of Abraham and Moses, God has continued to reveal mandates through the manifestations of Jesus Christ, Mohammed and, most recently, Baha'u'llah.

In addition to recognizing the validity of the three monotheistic religions, Baha'is also accept the doctrines of other world religions such as Zoroasterism and Buddhism.

What the Baha'is do not recognize is exclusivity in their faith; they expect a new prophet, and teachings that change as society changes.

"Truth is relative," Talleur said. "Of course, there are certain things, values, that never change...that killing is wrong, for example. But prophets bring the changes needed as society changes. 'It's a progressive revelation,' he said.

The Baha'i faith, as an expansion of earlier religions, directly deals with problems in today's society, calling for such things as compulsory education, equality between men and women, an auxiliary

Cappy Dick winners named

Winners of Punch Balls offered as the local prizes in Cappy Dick's misspelled words puzzle contest published in the comic section Sunday, June 19, are:

Julie Mole, 10, 626 W. Princeton; Danny Newbury, 10, 1521 Morposo Ave.; Joey Pike, 8, 607 N. Allyn; Frankie Boroch, 8, 960 E. Princeton; Brian Roche, 10, 2819 Canterbury Drive; David Reyes, 10, 746 N. Greenwood Ave.

All the winners will receive their prizes by mail.

universal language, elimination of racism and universal peace based on a world federation of nations.

By not identifying the faith with any one nation, Talleur said that the Baha'i faith has been able to attract followers of all races and nations. Examples of his claim are the nations represented by some local Baha'is.

Daisy Fakaval, and her daughter Hazel, both of Ontario, are originally from Tonga, an island in the South Pacific.

Former Christians, they became Baha'is almost 10 years ago when Daisy's husband was introduced to the religion.

Andre's wife, Nazare, is a native of Brazil. The couple met when Andre lived in Brazil as a Baha'i pioneer. Unlike a missionary, a pioneer is self-funded.

Andre's sister, Eddey York, of Ontario, is also a Baha'i.

York said she and her brother became interested in the Baha'i faith after becoming frustrated with Christianity.

"We were both raised as Methodists, but at some point we developed an idea of true values and our values were in conflict with the traditional Protestant churches," Andre said. "What I saw as a child was beautiful," said York, referring to her innocence in understanding religion. "But when I got older I didn't see all the different colors (races). Now I see it, I feel it, I communicate it." □

Beastly Reading program served up

By Joy Sommer

Feasting on Beastly Reading is what the Upland Library is serving up for local children this summer.

The program includes summer reading and activities designed to keep children reading and using the library, said Marie Rooth, children's librarian.

"Children involved in the program enjoy what they are doing without feeling that they are learning too," she said. "It can sharpen or maintain reading skills over the summer when sometimes children seem to lose some of those skills."

The program is now under way and will continue through August 19 with provision made for the interests and abilities of all ages.

Rooth attributes the popularity of this summer's program (they already have more than 400 signed up) to the participant's enjoyment of the board game provided.

"We have a game, similar to Monopoly, but involving monsters and food that the children can play in conjunction with the reading program," she said. "They seem to enjoy it so much, that we have trouble getting them to go home."

Right now the busiest time for those involved in the "Feast of Beastly Reading" is between the hours of 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Rooth suggests those wishing to come in avoid that time because they just don't have the staff to help the children. "We had hoped to have some junior high age or high school age students volunteer to come in and help but it didn't work out. Luckily, the Friends of the Library and staff members from the other parts of the library have been very helpful."

Last year's program drew more than 500 children by the end of the summer and Rooth said she expects because of the large number already signed-up, this year will be even more successful.

Rooth mentioned the "Good Listener Program" designed for pre-schoolers and those not "all that in to reading" to allow the youngest members of the family to participate also.

Pre-school Story Time is continuing throughout the summer at 10:30 a.m. on Thursdays.

project they want to do. Some people invest a lot of money in their projects, then never use the equipment again. "It has been somewhat of a fad, to get involved in stained glass, but now you can find a lot of equipment in garage sales," Rodriguez said of the craft's declining popularity. The process used to create stained glass art, as Rodriguez explained, seems very simple; after the pattern for the design is made, the pieces of glass are cut to fit and then soldered together with either lead or copper. Rodriguez worked almost four years with the "simple" process before she began teaching the art. Her classes, sometimes five a week, are taught through the Upland and Rancho Cucamonga departments of recreation and a private business in Norco during what little spare time she manages to squeeze in between "the kids, Brownies, Girl Scouts and everything else." For the next eight weeks, Rodriguez will teach a stained glass course Tuesday evenings at Lions Park, 9161 Baseline, in Rancho Cucamonga. □ sharing, passage of Proposition 13, loss of inheritance tax revenue and indexing of income taxes, relegate the state budget to day-to-day survival.

What does this mean to Upland? Because the city is a bedroom community, it is fully dependent upon property taxes and state-shared revenues. It has a very small commercial tax base and virtually no industry to tax. For these reasons we must find a new approach to the way we govern ourselves. Local government must have greater local controls (the very reason local communities, including our, incorporate). There must be much greater emphasis on individual and community responsibility to lessen the burden on government-provided services. This will, in turn, reduce the bureaucracy and personnel (money) required to keep local government functional. We need to shift emphasis in the way government is accountable to residents, and we must amend or eliminate state mandates we can no longer live with. We need to achieve and increase public confidence and trust in government. Finally, we must have a constitutional amendment that would assure local government and schools a dependable means of long-term financing and eliminate

Tilmans named acting dean at CPP

Anthony L. Tilmans of Upland has been appointed acting dean of the School of Engineering at Cal Poly Pomona, in an announcement made June 27 by President Hugh O. La Bounty. Tilmans' appointment is effective Sept. 1.

Tilmans joined the Cal Poly faculty in June, 1981, as chairman of the Engineering Technology Department, and served in that position until last September when he was named associate dean of the School of Engineering.

The new acting dean began his professional career in the Structural Division of Aluminum Company of America, where he worked for two years as a design engineer. Then followed 10 years at the University of Pittsburgh, as instructor and then assistant professor of civil engineering, where he was named "Outstanding Professor" for the 1967-68 academic year. From 1971-74 he was associate professor and Head of Civil Engineering Technology at the University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown.

He moved to Indiana State University,

Evansville, in 1971 and was director of engineering technology programs and professor of engineering technology at the university until 1981 and his arrival at Cal Poly. In 1977 he received the Southwestern Chapter Indiana Society of Professional Engineers "Engineer of the Year" award.

Tilmans received his B.S. and M.S. degrees in civil engineering in 1958 and 1960 from the University of Pittsburgh, and a Ph.D. degree in civil engineering in 1968 from Carnegie-Mellon University, Pittsburgh.

He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers; serves on the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology (ABET) as a member of the Technology Accreditation Commission since 1980; and on the American Society for Engineering Education (ASEE), currently serving from 1983-85 as chairman of the Engineering Technology Division.

He is an honorary member of Tau Alpha Pi, and in 1970 was named an honorary faculty member of Chi Epsilon, a civil engineering society.

Business booms for unique local hairstyling salon

Ten years ago, Gary Robley opened The Both of You in a side room of a Spanish-tiled building at 243 N. First St.

His staff, which basically performed haircutting services only, numbered five. Robley and his two daughters lived in a little house out back.

Today, the staff has grown to 16 and it serves, by Robley's estimate, about 1,000 customers per week. Staff members, whose experience ranges from 3 to 23 years, have been trained in a number of hairstyling techniques.

In addition, to providing a variety of services, including coloring, manicures and permanents, The Both of You features a swimming pool and a tanning room. A certified masseuse is there to provide a relaxing massage.

An electrolysis is ready to assist in permanent hair removal, and full waxing services are provided for hair removal on a temporary basis.

The establishment has grown into one of the few full-service salons in the area. Also included are facilities for facial and skin care, and there is even an antique shop featuring old juke boxes, slot machines and barber chairs.

Robley, 43, says he has to remove some of his antiques to make more room available for hairstyling, but he also plans to add a "plant room" somewhere in the future ("people like plants").

Business was going so well that Robley was able to move his family into another house several years ago. He credits the success of his business to a "relaxing atmosphere" — wine and cheese are served on Thursday nights and children are a no-no — and the fact that local residents can find few places like The Both of You in Upland. A recent 10-year anniversary celebration drew 500 people.

"I don't think there is any place like my place," Robley says. "People can come in early and lounge around by the pool...and they like it because they can come and have a massage, have their nails done and relax in the sun tan room."

He gives much of the credit to his staff, whose members he feels have "worked well together" over the years.

Park development comes of age

By Patricia Coladonato

Nothing defines a community like its parks.

City councils may come and go, zoning laws may change with each election and a population may shift with each passing decade.

But a park, once developed, becomes a permanent fixture of a city, offering visitors a safe haven against the ever-encroaching world.

In Rancho Cucamonga, park development has long taken a back seat to more pressing fiscal matters. During its six years of incorporation, police and fire protection, road construction and the maintenance of flood control channels and levees have soaked up a majority of the city's limited budget and capital improvement funds.

But no longer.

The Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act, which went into effect on Jan. 2, gives local cities an avenue for raising capital improvement funds by imposing a "special tax."

The act, which requires two-thirds voter approval before a city is allowed to raise funds through the sale of general obligation bonds, is now being studied by the Rancho Cucamonga City Council.

Rancho Cucamonga, with a population exceeding the 60,000 mark and with the second-largest land area in San Bernardino County, has just three developed parks.

The oldest, Vineyard Park, has a history pre-dating the incorporation of the city itself. Established in 1970, the 7.5-acre site has two community buildings, two little league fields, an area of open grassy space and restrooms.

Lions Park, opened in 1976, is the smallest of the developed parks, with 2.35 acres of open grassy space, no ball fields and one small playground.

In December 1979 the 8,700-square-foot facility known as Lions Community Center was completed on the park site. The center has five meeting rooms, which host the bulk of the city's recreational programs and activities.

The 10-acre Alta Loma Park on Beryl Street, with a soccer field, 2.5-mile jogging track, restrooms, small tot play yard and a graded parcel for soon-to-be-installed tennis courts, is the largest of the city's developed recreational sites.

Cucamonga-Guasti Park, a 40-acre site on Archibald Ave. complete with picnicking grounds, swimming lagoons, boat rentals and fishing ponds, although located within city limits, is actually part of the San Bernardino County park system and is neither run nor maintained by the Rancho Cucamonga Parks Department.

A final recreational, non-park site located in the city is the four-room Rancho Cucamonga Neighborhood Center, designed for community meetings and recreational classes.

The city's hope for its own all-encompassing park lies with the development of Heritage Park, a 40-acre site that, when complete, will be a multi-use facility the city predicts will be one of Southern California's premier equestrian areas.

However, a $2 million price tag has put the development of Heritage Park on indefinite hold.

"Because we need $2 million to complete Heritage park, it will be developed in a series of phases with the final design stage still subject to council approval," William Holley, community services director, explained. "At this time the Alta Loma Riding Club is the only organization utilizing a portion of the park site for their activities."

Several future parks are planned for Rancho Cucamonga. They include a 4.46-acre park that will be located south of the newly named Bear Gulch Elementary school and developed in concert with the school, set to open in September of 1985.

Church Street Park, a 6.65-acre site which will include a soccer field, ball diamond and playground, is being developed by the Marlborough Company in conjunction with its condominium project.

Finally, Rancho Cucamonga, with the help of the federal government and the Army Corps of Engineers, may become the first California city to develop a linear park along the flood control channel of Cucamonga Creek. This "linear park," scheduled to be complete in June of 1984, will be composed of a meandering jogging and horse trail that will run through Heritage Park and terminate at a small, yet-to-be-developed park. □
